ST. MIHIEL ATTACKED

Capture of This Important German Stronghold Occupies Attention of Allies in Region of Verdun.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, April 10.—The French with the capture of Les Esparges have obtained one of the main objects of their advance to the southeastward from Verdun. The position of Les Esparges dominates the plains of the Woerre and its occupation by the French is officially announced.

Progress from Verdun means heavy pressure on the northern flank of the Germans holding St. Mihiel, while the southern flank is threatened by the French advance between Pont au Moulin and the Meuse.

Fierce Counter Attacks.
In the southern part of this field of operations the Germans are delivering almost continuous counter attacks. They have made fifteen assaults on one point.

It is evident that the French are not only attempting to capture St. Mihiel, which has always been a danger point since its wedge was driven into the line of the allies, but are at the same time seeking to aid Russia by preventing the withdrawal of German troops for the relief of the hard-pressed Austrian and German forces in the Carpathians.

No New Developments.
Paris, April 10.—The French office this afternoon gave out the following: "There is nothing to add today to the official communication last night other than the receipt of supplementary reports relating that the two attacks which yesterday made us masters of the last German positions at Les Esparges, led to desperate bayonet fighting."

Forbidden Mass Meetings.
Rome, via Paris, April 10.—Both the parties which favored the intervention in Italy in the war and those which favor continuance of the armistice have made preparations to hold mass meetings Sunday throughout the country, but the police have forbidden such gatherings.

WAR FAILS TO STOP
BUILDING IN BERLINMuch New Construction Being Done in German Capital.—Improvements Being Made.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, April 10.—Foreigners who come to Berlin now are astonished to find how much new construction, notwithstanding the war, is going on in and under the streets. The municipality is building a subway under the principal north-and-south street of the city, and in carrying away the chief bridge over the Spree, it is also putting a four-track tunnel under the famous street Unter den Linden, so that it shall no longer be impeded by the appearance of the sight of street-cars crossing it. Further to the east another subway is in course of construction through very crowded business sections; one of the two great electrical companies is building it. It will connect suburbs in the north and northeast with those in the southeast.

Another important improvement between the Prussian and the Prussian railway authorities is the enlargement of the Friedrich-Strasse Station, the heart of the city. Here the enormous amount of traffic has been torn away in order to double the size of the building. The city of Berlin is engaged in other work besides those mentioned above. It is excavating a trench along the canal barges on the western side of the city after having opening a new one to the east of the city only about a year ago. It is also a wholesale market hall, a school of industrial art, besides about a half-dozen other schools.

SERBIANS TO HONOR
AN AMERICAN WOMANLady Ralph Paget Wins Appreciation for Her Zeal in Red Cross Activities.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Nish, Serbia, April 10.—In recognition of Lady Ralph Paget, the municipality of Uskub has decided to name the finest street in that city after her.

Lady Paget, wife of Sir Ralph Paget, a member of diplomatic service, is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Parson Stevens of New York. She has been in Serbia working with the Red Cross for some time. She became ill, but is now convalescing. Her death was at one time reported.

The death role of Serbian doctors from typhus fever is very heavy. During the last two months 101 doctors out of 452 have lost their lives.

EDDY DEDICATES ORGAN
AT CHRIST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AT CAPITAL CITY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., April 10.—A $10,000 pipe organ, installed in the Christ Presbyterian church, rebuilt after a fire of a year ago, was formally dedicated last night with a recital by Clarence Eddy. The organist dedicated the great organ at the Pan-Am Pacific exposition last week. The new church, representing an investment of $100,000, was occupied last Sunday for the first time. Rev. George R. Hunt, D.D., is pastor.

War News Summary.

Austria is reported to have abandoned her campaign against Serbia, bringing to a close the offensive operations which were the immediate cause of a general European conflict. Dispatches from Switzerland that Austria has given up the plan for a new attack on Serbia for the sake of sending additional troops to the Italian frontier.

Russia is said to have made an important capture of guns and munitions in the Carpathians. What is represented as information from the Austrian general staff is that in the battle along the Dukla front the Austrians lost 26,000 men.

Popular agitation in Italy concerning the attitude of that country has increased to a point which necessitates energetic action by authorities to prevent disorders. The factions for and against war have arranged a mass meeting for tomorrow which their leaders say will be held in spite of the police.

A French sailing vessel from London for New York was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight. The Germans allowed the crew of 25 men ten minutes in which to quit the vessel, and all were saved. A wrecked British schooner has been sighted off the American coast and is believed to have been attacked by a German warship several weeks ago.

The official reports of today indicate the fighting in France which started on Monday in the French attack between the Meuse and Moselle rivers, developed into a desperate struggle along a considerable portion of the western front. The statement from the German army headquarters mentions one after another a series of onslaughts by the allies. It would appear from the Berlin statement that English and French obtained no advantage of importance.

The Paris statement adds nothing of previous claims of French victories. In the east no changes are recorded.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

Sales Highest Since Big Boom
in 1909.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, April 10.—Scenes of wild excitement attended the renewal of ratios on stock exchange today. Sales in the first hour exceeded 500,000 shares, which surpassed all records since 1909, the year of the great speculation boom. The trading floor was crowded with members and the visitors gallery was lined with spectators. Over night buying orders and further stampede of the short interest lifted prices through the list.

on War's Outcome.

Rome, April 8, via Paris, April 9.—General Paul Pau of the French army, who stopped here on his way to Paris after a trip to Russia and the Balkan states, has been besieged by interviewers. He said Bucharest and Rome more than any other capitals he has visited had greeted him "fraternally." He refused any statement concerning his mission except to reiterate confidence in the final triumph of the allies.

ALLEGED FORGER IS ARRESTED BY POLICEWatertown Chief Takes Youth From Minnesota on Warrant Charging Forgery.

Another alleged forger was added to the record of the Janesville police department when Orin Rosaean, a young man barely of age, from Crookston, Minnesota, was arrested for the passing of two bad checks for five and ten dollars in this city yesterday. Rosaean passed around fifty dollars worth of checks alleged to be forged in Watertown and Chief H. C. Block of the latter place this noon took the young man back to face the warrant, which may mean penal punishment with family aid is extended to the young man.

Rosaean is a former student of St. John's military academy at Delaford, Wisconsin, and is acquainted with a number of young men here who have attended the institution. At Watertown it is said he was introduced to several men and passed off the worthless paper for cash. On coming to Janesville he hunted up a St. John's man and turned him for ten dollars. Word from Watertown revealed the fact that he was wanted and in the afternoon he was found by the police.

Rosaean claims to be of a wealthy and prominent family of Crookston and has a fortune awaiting him when he becomes twenty-six years of age. The checks passed were all on a Crookston bank and the prisoner declares, the president of the bank was appointed his guardian on his father's death. Too much spending, Rosaean says, caused the bank president to cut off the supply of cash and the checks passed were marked with red ink.

BUSY WEEK AHEAD IN LEGISLATIVE CIRCLESMany Bills Are to Be Considered in Various Committee Conferences on Monday Evening.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, April 10.—When the legislators return to Madison next week to resume work after the recess—both houses to re-assemble at 8:30 p. m. Monday—there will be nothing of any more urgency in the range of legislative work than what they left behind them when they went home, and while there will be just as much, the disposition to put on more speed hereafter may so assert itself that the net delay by reason of the long adjournment may be small.

The senate calendar for Monday evening is a blank, but for Tuesday there is an array of 38 bills in that house, including Senator Baxter's relating to time of payment of wages (twice a month) and Senator Perry's official state paper bill. Of the total, 21 are ready for engrossment and 17 for final action. Of these three are from the assembly.

Assembly Calendar.
The assembly calendar for Monday evening will carry twenty bills, but of the twelve ready for engrossment, eight are recommended by committee for death. Among three senate bills for conference, are those of Senator Boshard prohibiting tips and requiring the flag to be hoisted on school buildings.

For Tuesday the assembly calendar will carry twenty bills and a joint resolution to amend the constitution in relation to sheriff's tenure of office. One senate bill is on the list—that of Senator Weissleder for regulation of carrying concealed weapons and joined at Indianapolis, according to word brought back by John A. Metz, and Daniel Galvin, officers of the union local district council.

Quiz Committee's Bills.
Among matters of large interest now in prospect are the hearings on bills introduced by the special committee on investigation of departments, boards and commissions, of which bills there are four thus far, dealing with many state activities. The four bills would merge in two new boards and a new department, respectively, six individual offices, two commissions and nine boards and with an old department. This committee is expected to offer soon its additional measures. A majority of the committee has performed some work during the recess and has made progress in certain directions.

Measures of 50-50 Origin.
The legislature thus far has passed 36 measures, origin of which is a case of 50-50, half of them having been passed by senate and half assembly bills. These measures have all been signed by the governor.

In the senate an even 500 bills have been introduced, of which 73 have been passed, 136 have been postponed, 2 withdrawn, leaving 362 to be considered. The senate also has 37 assembly bills and 3 assembly joint resolutions yet to be considered and 17 senate joint resolutions not yet disposed of.

In the assembly 711 bills have been introduced, of which 54 have been passed by that body and 186 indefinitely postponed, a few being withdrawn. This leaves a large mass of undigested business in the shape of proposed legislation.

There are a few bills in the hands of the assembly committee on rules, but none at the present time in the hands of the senate committee on legislative procedure.

The legislative of 1913 placed 778 acts on the statute book, but the present legislature apparently will not prove as ambitious in respect to number of enactments as was its predecessor.

ON U. S. TERRITORYVilla-Zapata Agency at Washington
Claims It Constitutes a Violation of Neutrality Laws.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, April 10.—The Villa-Zapata agency here gave out a statement today stating that it would "induce course address itself to the government of the United States, objecting to the presence of Huerta on American territory, it being the purpose of Gen. Huerta and the Cienfuegos element, in violation of the neutrality laws, to attempt to procure their restoration to power in Mexico."

Officially it was stated that the Villa agency would protest against the admission of Huerta.

Fighting Near Mazatlan.
On board the U. S. S. Colorado, Mazatlan, April 9, by radio to San Diego, Calif., April 10.—A battle between Carranza forces under General Carranza and Villa followers under command of General Huerta, has been raging for two days at Mazatlan, Sinaloa, south of Mazatlan. Only meagre reports of hostilities have been received.

Aided by four big guns manned by federal artillery troops, recently brought to Mazatlan by the gunboat Guerrero, the Carranza forces have taken the offensive.

General Carranza has placed under martial law by General Ernesto Dami as military commandant.

Plan Detention Camp.
Brownsville, Tex., April 10.—Plans for a detention camp for 2,000 of 3,000 persons have been made by United States immigration authorities here. To this camp the refugees from Matamoros will be sent when the Villa attack on that city begins. Although Villa troops drew in close to Matamoros last night, the residents of that city show no signs of alarm.

AGREE TO ARBITRATE
STREET CAR STRIKEStreet Car Traffic Resumed at Wilkes-bar, Pa., as Result of Temporary Settlement.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Wilkesbar, Pa., April 10.—Following the agreement entered into last night between the Wilkesbar Electric Railway officials and their striking employees, in which they agreed to arbitrate their differences, there was a general resumption of street car traffic in Wyoming valley today. It is expected an agreement on a new wage scale will be reached in ten days. The men asked 25 cents an hour. Pending a settlement they will work at the old scale of 24 cents.

Immense Plant at Princeton,
New Jersey.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Princeton, N. J., April 10.—The Rockefeller foundation has announced it will shortly begin work on the construction of a new plant near Princeton for the study of animal diseases. The grounds, buildings, and equipment of the new laboratory will cost it is estimated $1,000,000.

Last week Governor Fielder signed a bill giving the state board of health the power to grant to regularly incorporated colleges, universities and philanthropic institutions in this state permission to make experiment on animals under certain restrictions.

At expenditure of $100,000 the foundation has purchased 430 acres of land situated east of Lake Carnegie.

SIX WEEKS' STRIKE
OF DOCKERS ENDEDBritish Dock Laborers Return to Work Under Former Conditions.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, April 10.—The formation of a dockers' battalion, coupled with the threat of the executives of the union to suspend the strikers, had the anticipated effect at Birkenhead today—the week end strike of the dockers collapsed.

After refusing for six weeks to work overtime on Saturdays, the men have given in and practically the entire body is helping today to relieve the freight congestion.

KILLS SWEETHEART
SELF AND HER SIRETriple Tragedy Occurs on Little Island Off Mouth of Panama Canal.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Panama, April 10.—The little island of St. Annes, off the north coast of Colombia, has just been the scene of a triple tragedy, involving a resident American and his daughter and a rival physician, who recently graduated from an American medical school in Memphis, Tenn. Arriving here Dr. C. Pusey first killed Miss Robinson and then shot her father, Theodore Robinson, later killing himself.

For some time the doctor had been a frequent visitor at the home of Mr. Robinson and finally paid Miss Robinson attention. His suit, however, was not viewed with favor by the young woman's parents and the physician was given to understand that he must cease his visits. The tragedy occurred on March 25.

CONFESSION SHOWS HOW GANG ESCAPED FROM A JAIL AT OZAUKEE, WIS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Calgary, Canada, April 10.—The cloud of suspicion is today removed from James Cassidy, Calgary business man and former sheriff of Ozaukee county, Wis. While he was sheriff, seven years ago, a gang of pickpockets escaped in a manner that caused suspicion to hang over Cassidy.

The ring leader of the gang, who escaped, has confessed. His sweetheart, a confederate, disguised as a tramp, stole into the sheriff's office, and with a piece of soap, got an impression of the key to the cell where the pickpockets were held. Keys were made and sent to the ringleader by the girl. The ringleader has scoured the friendship of a big bullock, kept there to guard the cell, by giving the dog the meat in his daily food.

Friends in Ozaukee county are urging Cassidy to return there.

FEMALE PEACE MOVEWrites a Letter Denouncing the Idea —Leaders, However, Refuse Note for Printing.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, April 10.—Publication of the fact that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt had written a letter denouncing the woman's peace propaganda caused a sharp discussion among leaders of the movement here today.

The matter test of the custody of Mrs. William J. Thomas, secretary of the woman's peace army, and she refused to allow its publication.

"Miss Jane Addams says she sees no reason for secrecy about the letter," Mrs. Thomas was told.

"She may have had that thought when she spoke, but now she agrees with me that there are sentences in the letter that it would be unwise to make public," retorted Mrs. Thomas, "although Colonel Roosevelt said he would be delighted to have the letter published."

One report had it that the colonel declared in the letter that pacifists in general "constituted a menace to the future welfare of the United States."

The missive was sent to Mrs. George Rublee of Washington.

FAMOUS SCULPTOR
RUN DOWN BY AUTOKarl Bitter, Director of Sculpture at Panama Exposition, Dies as Result of Injury.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, April 10.—Karl Theodore Francis Bitter, chief of department of sculpture at the Panama Pacific Exposition, and one of the best known sculptors of this country, died in a hospital here today from injuries received when he and Mrs. Bitter were run down last night by an automobile in Broadway. Mrs. Bitter's injuries are not serious.

Mr. Bitter was director of the sculpture of the Buffalo exposition and chief of the department of sculpture of the St. Louis exposition. He had executed many important private commissions, including the statue of Columbus, the statue of the American Revolution, and the statue of the American people. He designed the Astor gates for Trinity church here.

He was a member of the National Academy of Design. He was forty-seven years old, coming here in 1889 from Vienna, where he was born. His home was in this city.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., April 10.—The question of government ownership of railways will be decided tonight—at least to the satisfaction of Wisconsin and Minnesota university students—when the champion spellers of the two institutions hold their second annual debate. One contest will be staged here and another in Minneapolis.

The Badger teams comprise: W. A. Foster of Elkhorn, W. G. Kammer of Sparta, E. E. Muesel of Madison, W. E. Hanson of Wisconsin, W. Palmer of Watertown, and G. B. Blaisdell of Claremont, Cal. The Wisconsin teams won both contests last year.

PRISONERS AND GUNS WOULD MAKE LINE 625 MILES LONG

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, April 10.—To visualize the number of Russian prisoners and guns taken by von Hindenburg in the so-called "Winter Battle" to the east of the Masurian Lakes, one of the German papers has figured out what a great procession they would make.

If the 104,000 prisoners, the 300 pieces of artillery and the 2,600 wagons, it says, were to form a procession with four men abreast, with the artillery and wagons in usual marching order, they would reach 112 miles in length. It would require thirty hours for such a procession to pass a given point. In the same way it is figured that all the prisoners of war now held by Germany—a total of 750,000—would make a procession 625 miles long.

Le Treport, France, April 10.—The French three master ship Chateaubriand, from London to New York, with a cargo of chalk, was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight at 11:00 a. m. Thursday. The crew was saved.

Captain Grondin and twenty-four men aboard the vessel were given minutes by the German commander to launch their boats. The Chateaubriand was then torpedoed. After drifting about all the rest of the day and that night in the bitter cold weather and without food, the crew sighted the French coast yesterday morning and landed here safely.

The Chateaubriand, a ship of 2,029 tons, sailed from London April 4.

Escape Submarine.
New York, April 10.—Officers of the steamer Hungarian Prince, which reached here today from Shields, said the steamer was pursued on February 24th by a German submarine off Beachey Head on their homeward passage from Behia Blanca for London. The weather was rough at the time and when the periscope of the submarine was sighted the steamer put on full speed ahead to get away. The captain said he could not tell if a torpedo had been fired, but thought the submarine was able to get in a position to use one. She chased the steamer for some distance before abandoning the pursuit.

Liverpool, April 10.—After living in a waterlogged schooner five days on rations of from three to six crackers a day, the crew of the schooner and his crew of five were rescued at sea and brought into this port today aboard the schooner Oriole.

Captain Cooke, in charge of the schooner Oriole, of New York, left Lahav, Nova Scotia, April 1, with lumber for New York. The schooner was wrecked in the northwest gale of April 2. The crew, adrift upon the sea, had no food. Six crackers apiece were dealt out each day, but later this was reduced to three. There were only five crackers left when the Oriole sighted the wrecked ship. The shipwrecked sailors suffered intensely from cold and exposure as well as hunger.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Los Angeles, Cal., April 10.—Allison D. Ede, commander of submarine F-4, lost in Honolulu harbor March 5, said he had received a letter from the naval officer in command who declared the submarine was defective. Lieutenant Ede, his brother, stated that the vessel was leaky, and otherwise in poor condition.

Mr. Ede said, however, that Lieutenant Ede had written that the vessel was to be supplied with new motors while in dry docks. Previous reports stated that the motors were worn and old and therefore believed to have been responsible for the loss of the F-4 declined to give out the letter written by his brother two years before the F-4 was under way on a cruise from which it never returned.

Trouble is said to have been the culmination of an old feud.

Helping The Small Store Keeper

Because of his neighborhood limitations it is hard for the small storekeeper to advertise. But he can make the manufacturer's newspaper advertising a splendid means to draw business.

This advertising in the newspapers makes the goods familiar to the people in the storekeeper's neighborhood.

They will want to get them and they will go to the store that sells them.

When the small storekeepers show the brands the manufacturer is exploiting at the time the advertising appears in the newspapers, they bring business their way.

The effort does not increase their expense a penny and it adds pleasantly to their volume of business.

BIG SOCIALIST GAIN
MADE IN MILWAUKEEELECT FOUR OF FIVE MEMBERS ON CITY SCHOOL BOARD AT TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING

Attempt to Shut Out American-made
Goods in British Columbia
Proves a Failure.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, April 10.—The local event of the week was the judicial school board election of Tuesday last. The total vote cast was 35,723, taking the hardest contest as the basis. This is about 50 per cent of the vote cast for government last fall, and the successful candidate received about 20 per cent of what a full vote ought to be. One thing the election clearly demonstrates is that so-called "non-partisan" politics have done their perfect work here, as they always will, wherever tried. In the interest of "non-partisan" politics we have had the Socialist scarecrow paraded so often that nobody any longer pays attention to it. It is plain that the Socialist candidates all ran ahead of the Socialist ticket in the most aristocratic East Side wards. Mrs. Berger, who is the wife of Victor L. Berger, has been on the board for some years. She was formerly a teacher in the public schools, and has proved herself to be a woman of capability and usefulness. Another Socialist woman, Elizabeth N. Thomas, the secretary of the Social Democracy party, was one of the new members of the school board chosen. The result favors the socialists four of the five members of the school board. It is interesting to compare the five successful judges who had the largest vote, with the vote on the five members of the school board:

Winslow	18,762
Schweitzer	18,667
Karel	18,599
Cordes	17,377
Gregory	17,157
School board.
Mrs. Berger	23,754
Augustyn	20,081
Ramstack	18,820
Starn	17,208
Mrs. Thomas	16,818

It is of no use, with that showing, to pretend that the voters who went to the polls, except the socialists themselves, made any invidious distinction, unless it was in favor of the socialist candidates. But 50,000 voters who should have voted stayed away.

Trade Doctrines.

In discussing the subject in the past these letters have called attention to the small number of the slogan, "Buy your goods at home." Support of domestic industries! This doctrine carried to its logical conclusion would shut up all our factories and send us back to the stone age. When the shoe-maker made a pair of shoes for his neighbor, the miller and took his pay in flour. It is worth while, however, to turn the thing around and look at it through the big end of the telescope. Last month the United States consul at Fernie, British Columbia, reported that large posters were being put up on the Fernie dead walls urging the purchase of Canadian made goods. He interviewed the local merchants and reported that he did not anticipate "any pronounced reaction against the American products that might be gained in stock. The general opinion is that Canada will continue to be governed in their buying by consideration of personal advantage and individual tastes, as formerly." He explains that through the large circulations of newspapers and magazines from "the states" our goods are very familiar to the British Columbian trader. The figures show that the trade of this country with Canada is 400 millions a year, and the amount of our trade with all South America, but this slogan of "Buy at home," would kill it all and shut up the factories that supply Canadian goods. Just now when business is dull, the little fellow mounts his anti-hill, and surveying the world, says, "The way to promote home industry is to buy at home!" and the logic of it is, "and cut off intercourse with all our neighbors." It is a great program, magnificent in its destructive possibilities. Don't do any business that you can't do at home, and help your town to grow backward toward the early nineteenth century. The nonsense of such talk needs only to have its measure taken. The big town, run by big men wants to grow, and to do business not alone with its own people, but with its neighbors, and with their neighbors, and with the uttermost parts of the earth. We do not sell our copper or our wheat at home just at home, but we would be obliged to eat the wheat, if we burst on it, and leave the copper in the ground if we adopted the slogan of the Potunk magazine.

Utney Has A Rival.

The "Utney" is not the only peril that confronts the electric road. An Iowa paper says that the magnificent road improvement projects in that state contemplate lines of motor cars, and motor trucks. Instead of our thimble-rigging scheme of "state aid" (that the counties raise by taxation) Iowa counties are bonding themselves up into the millions to build country roads, with visions of motor bus and motor truck service to follow. The automobile people have done a great deal to promote activity in road building everywhere, that is in large measure pure waste, the expense of such waste is followed by further experiments in motor conveyances, in advance of all legitimate necessity, there will not only be more waste there, but there will be great waste in the shrinkage of electric railway values, and the municipally owned electric railway will come in for its share. Unquestionably there is a future for horseless conveyances of all kinds. The war in Europe is demonstrating that, and it is well for electric railway owners to open their eyes to the importance of this demonstration. But unless people want harder times than they have already, they had best be moderate in their progress, and not leave a path of destruction along their improved highways that will put perpetual mortgages on their farms. It is not

FEDS GET THE JUMP IN EARLY SCHEDULE

King Baseball Takes His Summer Throne Today When Federals Get Starting Flag.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

OPENING GAMES.

At Brooklyn—Buffalo.
At Baltimore—Newark.
At Chicago—St. Louis.
At Kansas City—Pittsburgh.

(By Hal Sheridan.)
New York, April 10.—They're off. The 1915 baseball season was opened today by the Federal League, getting the jump on O. B. big leagues by four days.

At Brooklyn, Baltimore, Chicago and Kansas City today, the fans gathered to usher in King Baseball for his 1915 reign with the umpire's cry of "Play Ball."

The Fed's debut today will be followed April 14 by the opening of the National and American leagues' seasons. The baseball war is still on, but many wise ones declare that this will be the last year of war.

The Federals went ahead today, however, with all the pomp and circumstance of a royal coronation. Their team rosters presented many new faces as a result of winter raids on the ranks of the foe. All of the teams have been strengthened during the lay off.

At Baltimore today, where the International team was driven to Richmond by Fed competition, the New York team, led by pitcher, Ed Walsh, of the Chicago Cubs, made its debut. Walsh, the "Human Darning Needle" is slated for the mound honors for Newark, whose team comprises most of the 1914 Fed pennant winners.

The new grounds of the Newark club at Harrison, N. J., will probably be christened April 16 by the Baltimore team.

The umpires' staff of the Feds this year consists of Chief William Brennan, James Johnstone, of Newark; Fred Westervelt, of Richmond; William Finerman, of Erie; Harry Howell, of Brooklyn; Louis Fife, of Chicago; Barry McCormick, of Chicago; and Spike Shannon, of Minneapolis.

RITCHIE OUTPOINTS JOHNNY GRIFFITHS

American Lightweight Champion Too Fast for Akron Batter in Toledo Go.—Welsh Outpointed Again.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 10.—Willie Ritchie, American lightweight champion, had a clean margin over Johnny Griffiths in a fast six round mill here last night. Ritchie had every round with the exception of the third, which was even. Griffiths proved a rugged mixer, but Ritchie was always on top of him, leading his right uppercut and left jab with ease. Ritchie weighed 139 pounds and Griffiths 143. A Draw Verdict.

Toledo, Ohio, April 10.—Billy Wagner of Chicago stepped on ten rounds with Champion Freddie Welsh here last night, and at the end had a clean shade over the title holder, having

MORRIS MILLER

Miller Huggins, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is an example of what sometimes befalls a fellow who is too shrewd. A year ago Huggins made a trade with the Pirates, whereby he got five ball players for three. Everybody said Miller had been cheated—and he was such a nice little fellow, too. Some folks were for re-appointing Fred Clarke to the police for his action in "cheating" Miller. Oh, yes, you remember how it turned out, don't you? The men that Huggins gave away "diverged" and the five he got rounded into stars and end enabled the Cardinals to make a great fight for the pennant in 1914. Since then Huggins has been known as "David Harum" of baseball. A dozen times since then Huggins has tried to make trades, and just about as often has he been balked.

Henry Zimmerman of the Chicago Cubs had a boil on his neck, could not play, and to pass away the time he read the rules of baseball. An epidemic of boils might help the major leagues to a great degree.

That twenty-one player limit rule is causing National league managers all sorts of worries. For instance, listen to this complaint from Roger Bresnahan, boss of the Cubs: "Here I have eight twirlers all signed up to contracts with the ten-day clause carefully eliminated. These twirlers probably will have to be retained because no other club will take their contracts. Yet it stops me from giving the youngsters a show, as I really only want about seven pitchers on my staff."

Marty Kavanagh, who essayed to be the Tigers' regular second-sacker last season, but who was found wanting by the league, is blaming basketball for his failure at the key stone sack. Kavanagh each winter is a star with a crack Harrison, N. J. Kavanagh has been injured several times in the strenuous court sport and now announces he's going to quit basketball.

Jake Daubert has purchased forty acres in California upon which he will raise hogs. He will sell his Brooklyn residence.

Two Western league catchers have threatened to leave the game. Shoddy Shaw, the veteran backstop of Des Moines, has written Manager Isbell that he will remain at a greenhouse where he is now employed in Ohio. The other receiver to retire is Peachey Graham of Wichita, formerly with the Giants, who is dissatisfied with the contract, which was trimmed to a frazzle.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS.
Pitchers McConnell and Robbins have been released by the Chicago Cubs, the former unconditionally and the latter to Kansas City.

Doc Johnston on first, Spooks Gerber at shortstop, Hans Wagner on second and Jimmy Viox on third is the way the Pirates will line up in the infield at the start of the season, according to the dope.

The following item from an account of one of the Athletics' games is just a sample of the bouquets that Nap Lajoie is drawing daily. "The game was alive with brilliant plays. Lajoie making his second stunner in between plays. Luders burned one between plays and second in the sixth. It went right on a line and Lajoie speared it with one hand six inches from the ground."

PREMO BROS.

Hardware and Sporting Goods.

Johnny Dobbs of the New Orleans club has about given up the idea of trying to make a shortstop out of Red Blum, the Cleveland boy. Dobbs is convinced that Blum would make good at short with a little more practice, but says he hasn't time to do this now. For that reason, Blum has been shifted over to third base, where he is said to be making a big hit.

Manager Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox expects to depend largely upon his left-handed pitchers during the first months of the season. He has Leonard, Collins and Ruth ready to do their share of the work, and Foster, Shore and Mays to help them. Joe Wood and Vean Gregg are a couple of lame ducks who can not be depended upon for some time. Carrigan will carry eight twirlers this season, he announces.

Bert Shotton and Clarence Walker, Browns' outfielders, have swapped positions. Branch Rickey ordered the trade. Shotton will play left and Walker center. Shotton is considered an excellent fielder, but Rickey thinks Walker has the better throwing arm. Walker led the American league outfielders in assists last season. He had thirty in 145 games.

EVERS CLAIMS UMPIRES DON'T WANT TO PUT MEN OUT OF GAME.

"What is the definition of a good umpire?"

Johnny Evers, second baseman of the Boston Braves, makes this answer:

"Good umpires are governed by the interests of baseball as a sport, the interests of the league, the interests of spectators, and lastly but by no means least of all by the demands of their dignity."

before putting them out of game and the star of the cast was put off the stage in the middle of the second act. I would be among the first to protest. Fans pay their money to see stars in baseball sometimes as much as they do to see the game."

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Why the Paige is Supreme

THE Paige Fairfield "Six-46" has everywhere proven the most popular six-cylinder motor car—of any price—on the market this season.

Many elements enter into that! The beauty, power, comfort; unequalled quality, riding-luxury and supreme value are obvious reasons. There is another reason, that is the public knowledge that the Paige "Six-46" means real economy. If you have seen the new Paige Six "46", you can readily understand why the item of Depreciation on this car is bound to be a small one. This car is one year ahead of the field. It is not an old model "dolled" up with a fictitious 1915 label and a fictitious price. It is refreshingly new in lines, design and equipment. It belongs to no "school" for it is rapidly establishing a school of its own—the School of 1916.

The Paige Glenwood "Four-36" has this season easily retained its supremacy—for value and service—among the medium-priced four-cylinder cars.

Whether buying a "Six" or a "Four", the Paige Purchaser is satisfied that he is buying the Supreme Value. There are five Cardinal Reasons for Paige Supremacy. They are:

FIRST—Paige Design. It is the popular comment everywhere that the Paige "Six" is the most distinctive looking car as well as the most beautiful car produced this year. Its lines are an adaptation of the best European designs. It looks distinguished, aristocratic, "smart" and powerful. The Paige Glenwood has the same individuality. No matter where you see a Paige Car—bowling down the road or parked on the curb—you recognize Paige Character instantly.

SECOND—Paige Comfort. The Paige "Six" has a wheel base of 124 inches. It accommodates seven passengers luxuriously in its ample seats of soft leather upholstery. Its cantilever spring suspension gives it that marvel of easy riding over all kinds of roads. It is equipped with the Gray & Davis electric lighting and starting systems which means the fullest realization of luxurious motoring. It has the modish one-man top. The Glenwood "Four-36" seats its five passengers in comfort. It is also distinguished for its easy riding. It also has the Gray & Davis equipment. It is in every way the "Four" what the "Sixes" are the "Sixes"—Supreme.

THIRD—Paige Power. We believe that the Paige Continental motor (3½x5½) of the Paige "Six" is for this car the most ideally powerful and most flexible motor in the world. The Rayfield carburetor adds the highest factor of ease of control and reliability. But Paige "Six" or Paige "Four", when you sit behind the wheel you sense the tremendous power that flattens out hills and sweeps you buoyantly over any road conditions. Paige Cars are equipped, too, with the Bosch magneto—the world's standard ignition—the multiple disc coil—insert clutch.

FOURTH—Paige Economy. [Whether it be a Paige "Six" or Paige "Four," you KNOW that the soundness of Paige Design and the Excellence of Paige Materials and Paige Workmanship mean Economy to YOU. That is Economy in Operation—which is gasoline and oil—and Economy in Maintenance—which means small repair bills and continuous, year-round Paige Service. A Paige Car is always and everywhere an asset.

FIFTH—Paige Value. Our answer to that is a question—two questions: Do you know of any six-cylinder, seven-passenger car offering any such high-grade features as detailed above that you can buy for a price within $200, yes, or $300, of the price of the Paige "Six"?

That price is $1395

Again, do you know of any four-cylinder, five-passenger car offering such high-grade features as detailed above that you can buy for a price within $200, yes, or $300, of the price of the Paige "Four"?

That price is $1075

See these Paige Cars. Make your own comparisons. If you do that, we know what your selection must be. You will say—as the whole country is saying—"I think I'll buy a Paige."

This line, and every close server notices that the denizens of every kingdom are noted for pluck and endurance.

The birds which came to us from the south, with the first breath of spring, waited patiently for a chance to build a home. Now they are busy, and in a few weeks the first little family will be crowded out of the nest to make room for another. The robin fights for her young until they are able to shift for themselves, and then ceases to fight or worry. The mother bird has pluck, and the children soon learn the lesson.

An acorn is dropped in an open field and long before the tender sprout appears above the surface, the little acorn has commenced to find its way down among the rocks beneath. They can't remove the obstacles, but they utilize them, and as the sprout shoots upward the little roots find anchorage below. And the tree grows strong as it bends to the blast and in time becomes the giant of the forest, because it was firmly rooted in childhood. We can't do better by our children than God did by the acorn when He taught it how to grow and develop.

Some very good people profess to live in an atmosphere which is free from temptation, and flatter themselves that they belong to God's select few, who are more highly favored than the common herd. That is a pernicious notion, and a poor conception of the Father of us all.

Character—the most priceless jewel which any soul possesses—is not a hot house product. It is not confined to any creed or system, but is a quality which is developed in every church, because the church is supposed to aid in its development.

Character is a plant of slow growth. It is the product of pluck and determination to do right under any and all circumstances. It means so much more than profession, that people who possess it, in rare degree, never advertise it.

The statement is made that the perpetual sunshine of California becomes monotonous, and that a cloudy day is a luxury. This is just as true of character building, and the goody, goody atmosphere in which some people profess to dwell, is so abnormal, that development is always weak and one-sided.

The people who amount to anything in life, whether in or out of the church, are the people who meet and overcome obstacles, with brava heart and steady purpose. They do not pray to be delivered from temptation. All they ask for is strength to overcome, and this request is so reasonable that it always meets a listening ear.

We are permitted to live today in an age of fulfillment. The pioneer work, with all its hardships and privations, has been performed, and the land has been conquered, mountains have been tunneled, and the continent redeemed, by men of brave heart and sublime faith, who have passed on.

We travel in luxury through the country, or listen to a familiar voice a thousand miles away, with no thought of appreciation, and the only pluck invested is the nerve which prompts us to complain of the service. Other hands have planted and watered. Other hearts have bled and sacrificed, and we enjoy the rich inheritance resulting.

While we may not be called upon to blaze a trail and build a highway across the continent, there are other fields of endeavor where pluck and determination are still in demand, and one of the most fertile, just now, is the advanced step in civilization which calls for a higher standard of man.

Circumstances have conspired to give to the cause of temperance a new impetus. Some of the nations of the old world, now at war, have enforced prohibition, as an economic measure, and results are so gratifying that the restriction is liable to be maintained after peace is declared.

In our own land the sentiment is growing and dry territory is steadily on the increase. It will not be at all surprising if national prohibition is declared within a decade. It requires pluck and determination to reform from the drink habit, but it requires neither to refrain from forming the habit when opportunities are lacking.

It is said that the boys and girls of Kansas don't know what a saloon looks like, because they never saw one. With national prohibition the next generation would be equally innocent, and one form of vice would be forever dispelled from the land.

Honesty is classed among the rare graces of character and yet honesty in itself never accomplishes very much. A lazy man can be as honest as the sun. Honesty is the foundation of character, but it is only one of the elements which enter into the construction.

The thing which counts, and wins in the race, is pluck and determination. The boy who gets to the front is not the boy who says "I'll try," but the boy who says "I will," and obstacles are as necessary to the development of this sort of spirit as the air we breathe.

The captains who sail the high seas, as well as the captains of industry, were boys "before the mast" where pluck and courage was their only salvation. The road to success is more inviting today than ever before, and destiny lingers close by the highway.

SNAP SHOTS

The wind occasionally stops blowing, but the people never do.

If you wish to please the boy to whom you are giving a present pick out something he can break.

Eph Wiley, who spends a good deal of time in travel, says the most difficult thing to procure is a medium soft-boiled egg.

Most children admit they are wiser than their parents. But the probabilities are that they are no wiser than their parents were at their age.

The easiest way of arousing a man's enthusiasm is to show him a way to get money without earning it.

"He is the sort of fellow," said Eph Wiley yesterday in paying his respects to his son-in-law "who enjoys looking at his own photograph."

When a reformer says the people are experiencing a wonderful awakening, that is an indication he is going to pass the hat.

Probably the most worthless opinion is the average man's prediction as to the result of a prize fight.

Speaking of ability to assimilate punishment, Ben Whitlatch has taken his meals at lunch counters for more than forty years.

A fat stranger passed down the street yesterday. "Who is the delightful?" Eph Wiley asked.

Next Season's Dances. We have gone to the trouble of inventing a few dances which we recommend to the Dancing Masters' association and which we will gladly demonstrate to anybody who wishes to see them.

Some of the more prominent dances invented by us and recommended for the smart set of polite society are the following:

The anglo-worm glide.

The spinal meningitis schottische.

The wildcat whirl.

The hippopotamus hitch.

The delirium tremens two-step.

The tarantula twist.

The St. Vitus valse.

The Salome slide.

The billy goat bump.

There is everything in these dances which is calculated to offend the tastes every reason to believe that they will become very popular.

DELIVERY SYSTEM STARTS ON MONDAY

New Idea of Efficient Carrying of Goods Between Merchant and Customer Is Ready.

Janesville's new delivery system for downtown stores will become effective Monday morning. Arrangements have been complete for the past several days and bright and early next week nine new wagons will start on their initial trips on as many different routes.

Practically every grocery concern in the downtown district will have its orders delivered under the new system. Several other merchants of different lines have also made arrangements to have their goods delivered after this manner.

The distributing station where all goods will be assembled for sorting for the various routes has been located on the east side of the river. Manager Schupe has engaged the Union House barn for his teams and horses.

The ordered goods will be brought from the different stores throughout the day and assorted for the nine routes. Five deliveries will be made, three each morning and two during the afternoon.

While it is expected that a little confusion might prevail until the merchant and customer and Manager Schupe have matters moving smoothly, it is hoped that no complaint will be offered until the new system has been given a fair trial. Mr. Schupe has assured the merchants that after a month's trial they will be highly pleased with the venture.

COMPANIES PROTEST AT POLE ORDINANCE

CLAIM THAT DISTRICT IS TOO LARGE AND TIME LIMIT TOO SHORT.

HEARING IS ARRANGED

Objections Will Be Fully Aired at a Meeting of City Commission Friday the Twenty-Third.

Reports from the utility companies affected by the proposed ordinance drafted by the city commission to secure the removal of telephone poles from the business district, raising objections to the proposed legislation, will be submitted to the city commission at the next ordinance hearing, which will be held at the city hall, at 2 p.m. on Friday, April 23rd at the city hall. At the meeting yesterday afternoon representatives of the companies, after reading the ordinance, declared that not enough time was given, that the zone is too big, and the work should be done gradually so as not to cause a burdensome an expense within a limited time.

The city officials, members of the city council, announce their intention to stand firm in securing the removal of the poles on a district from Division to Academy street, on Milwaukee street; Main street, from Prospect avenue to Court street, and possibly River street, from Wall to Pleasant. If the companies show just reason why the time allowed in the ordinance, until August 1st, is too short to comply with the order, the councilmen declared that they would grant a fair extension, but not wishing to work a burden on any company in pushing the work in an unreasonable time limit. Public sentiment demands that poles on the main streets are nuisances, but will not allow too great an extension, however the council rule.

J. T. Krizek, attorney for the Wisconsin Telephone company, in speaking of the effect on the company, stated at the meeting that it would require an expenditure of from $25,000 to $30,000 to comply in the large district. "The Wisconsin company has been contemplating the ridding of the poles on the main streets in Janesville, but the area is unusually large. If the companies affected could agree on a co-operative system the Wisconsin company would be ready to do as much as possible toward the removal of the poles, but it would require a big expense and much planning," said Attorney Krizek.

The Wisconsin phone company is not the only one that has been having much of their long distance wires and a vast number of local wires on Milwaukee street. It is the long distance wires and, as it impairs the service. The Wisconsin company, it is said, has sufficient conduits to carry the wires and can easily carry their wires to the central exchange through alley and back streets. The Rock County company has the major part of their wires underground and will not be subject to heavy expense.

The Janesville Electric company has started underground work under the bridge and gradually taking off their power poles from the street. P. H. Korst, president of the company, said at the meeting that the ordinance would mean the spending of at least thirty or forty thousand dollars and require a great deal of work that would prevent extensions. By gradual elimination the electric company would be in a position to remove the poles, for it is to be admitted and realized that the poles are a nuisance. In a year the change from the direct system of current will be made and this will do away with a countless number of wires and poles thriving like chameleons on the main streets.

"If the ordinance was passed with a time limit it would remove the poles from the main streets in both sides if the street for a considerable length of time, for both the telephone and electric company would have to place conduits along the main streets on opposite sides of the streets. It is possible the telephone companies would place their conduits in a trench requiring additional ditches. We would have to dig in the rear of streets or in alleys for disturbing the wires and this would require extensive trench work to carry the wires."

The zone, Mayor Fathers announced at the meeting, was to prevent a fire hazard, and this point is a paramount consideration. The great number of poles would mar the effect of the proposed "white way." They also prevent good drainage.

The lighting company is to be benefited by the main street lighting system and should offer no objections to a reasonable ordinance to make the system a success," remarked Mayor Fathers this morning.

ROCKFORD MAN FLIES BUT FALLS IN LAKE

R. J. Hassel of the Forest City Boys' Hydroplane Drops in Lake Michigan.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Chicago, April 10.—R. J. Hassel, a wealthy business man of Rockford, Ill., clung for an hour today to a small sized hydro-plane a mile off shore from Lake Mills, Ill. When brought to shore in a canoe he was suffering from exposure in the icy waters in the lake. Mr. Hassel recently purchased the hydro-aeroplane from Harold McCormick. The new owner took daily lessons and Thursday made two successful flights. Today he skinned the surface for a half a mile. Then he took to the air. The machine toppled over when Mr. Hassel tried to alight. He was thrown into the water and had difficulty in finding a rescue craft. Patrick Skanes of Lake Forest discovered a canoe and paddled out to the amateur aviator's rescue.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Helen J. Wray

The funeral services for the late Mrs. Helen J. Wray will be held at the family residence, 913 Milwaukee avenue, Monday afternoon at two o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev. J. McLaughlin of Waukesha, formerly of Presbyterians here.

He will be assisted by Rev. G. E. Parison, present Presbyterian pastor. The pallbearers will be the five sons and one son-in-law of the deceased. They are James G. Reichel, Charles, Edward and William, and A. L. Hayner of Antigo. Interment in Oak Hill cemetery.

Funeral for Esther Katzmark was held Friday afternoon at two o'clock at the home and at 2:30 at the Presbyterian church. Rev. Parison officiating. The pallbearers were: Mar Falk, Hugo Bahr, George Triloff, Frank Roach, Ruben Selgren and Gaylord Davidson. Burial was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Adah Gibbs

Mrs. Adah Gibbs, formerly a resident of this city, died at her home in Madison at nine-thirty this morning, aged 80 years. Mrs. Gibbs' maiden name was Chapple and she was born in Devonshire, England, and came to Janesville while a young girl. She was united in marriage to Thad W. Gibbs in this city on September 6, 1859. Her husband has been dead for a number of years. She is well known in Janesville and resided for a number of years here after Mr. Gibbs' death.

The remains will be brought to Janesville on the 10:35 train on Monday over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and will be taken immediately to the Oak Hill cemetery, where services will be conducted by Rev. Henry Willmann of Trinity Episcopal church.

She leaves a sister, Mrs. George Marden of Corners, Ohio; a brother, Harry Chapple, of Basstrop, Texas; two nieces in Buffalo, New York, Mrs. W. F. Douglas and Miss Downs; a niece, Frances A. Ryckman, of this city; and a grand nephew, Willard W. Brunson.

Picnic Up River: Nine young ladies left about noon for a picnic up the river, making their travel by foot. They took lunch with them and planned to enjoy the day. Those who went are the Misses Margaret Birmingham, Phyllis Kelly, Florence Nuzum, Sybil and Carol Richardson, Dorothy Korst, Josephine Bliss, Manilla Powers and Ruth Granger.

Marriage Licenses: Marriage licenses have been issued to the following: John T. Backe and Alice M. Stahl, both of Rockford; Glenn R. Stevens and Nova-Olivia Bankind, both of Beloit; Louis J. Blizbiks and Mary Kahla, both of Beloit; George L. McGee and Mary Elizabeth MacDonald, both of Janesville.

ADJOURNS SENTENCE SO YOUTH MAY SEE MOTHER AT THE JAIL

Earl Hopkins Faces Year in Waupun for Second Offense Larceny Count—Busy Morning in Court.

Earl Hopkins, aged 24 years, of Evansville, will probably be sentenced to one year in the state's prison, on Monday morning, when the young man will be arraigned on the charge of petty larceny and the second offense count of having served a term in Waupun. Hopkins was brought before Judge Maxfield this morning and pleaded guilty to the warrant, after waiting his right to a preliminary examination. The prospect of a term in Waupun again did not meet with the approval of Hopkins, who asked that sentence be deferred until he could see his mother in the prison.

Under the statute the maximum sentence for the second offense larceny count is one year in prison and this sentence Judge Maxfield told the young man this morning. The court believed the theft of a suit case containing clothing, valued at $6.50, owned by George Judd, from the Sheraton hotel, for warrant a heavy sentence. "The prospect of a term in Waupun again did not meet with the approval of Hopkins, who asked that sentence be deferred until he could see his mother in the prison."

CHOOSING

Two young folks were engaged in the fascinating occupation of studying the various record catalogues to select just what music they should buy with the ten dollars at their disposal.

They compiled list after list, selecting, rejecting and selecting again, delighting in some fortunate find or sighing to discover that some longed for record was beyond their means.

Which is the Real Pleasure?

Finally one of them threw down her catalogue with a gesture of impatience. "O dear," she bewailed, "this is so tantalizing that there's no fun in it. I wish I had money enough to order anything I wanted. That would be real pleasure."

The other girl looked thoughtful. "I wonder if it would be so much more fun than this?" she questioned. "We have to plan and sacrifice and contrive, and so we love what we get. Would we love our records so much if we had them without effort? Wouldn't having anything you wanted and never having to select or contrive be rather flat and tasteless as soon as you got used to it?"

What do you think about it, reader friend?

Choosing is sometimes very hard, but after all isn't it part of the spice of life?

Why Rich Men and Their Wives Keep Working.

Doubtless that's the reason the rich men who have money enough to buy anything they could possibly want with the scratch of a pen, keep on working—not because they want more money but because only in their work can they find the chance to contrive and plan, to scheme for something that is hard to get, and to taste the spicy savor of difficult attainment.

And doubtless it's for the same reason that the wife who struggles to get into the exclusive circles of society when they might have just as interesting and worthwhile friends outside the pale.

We think we are forced to contrive and scheme and choose, but as a matter of fact we want to.

"I Choose This."

It's one of our most deeply rooted instincts. Don't you remember how you and your brother or sister used to go through your picture book saying, "I choose this." "I choose that?" The whole picture book with all the pictures in it was yours but you wanted to choose.

Selection is self-expression.

A man's choices are his personality and his life.

Great poverty or great wealth alike take away the power of choice.

Let's be happy then that you and I have neither.

THE ENVOIUS EEL

One day an envious eel remarked, "I wish that I had been created like the tiger with a lovely striped skin."

"It isn't fair that some should have such lovely coats," said he, "while others only have the plain black shiny kind, like me."

Just then his playmates said to him, "Come, let's play hide and seek."

But this young eel felt so abused he didn't want to speak.

His playmates gathered round him and said, "What's all this fuss?"

"Well," said the eel, "if you must know, I'm very envious."

"But when he'd told the reason they said, 'You silly eel, you certainly are foolish to feel the way you do.'"

"Why don't you know that tigers are killed most every day because folks want their lovely skins; how would you like that, eh?"

The eel said, "Goodness, gracious! I really never knew."

About such things, I am an eel, if that is true."

You see, it's just as well to be content with what you are, for if you changed you might find out you were worse off by far.

Heart and Home Problems

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have been going with a boy for over seven months, and we have had a good bit of each other. A few days ago we had a little fight and now when he passes me in the street he looks at me as if he speaks but does not make any attempt to try to go with me. Please tell me how I can regain his friendship.

(2) It is proper for me to speak to him.

ANXIOUS.

(1) If you were to blame for the quarrel, apologize, but his fault was his fault, wait until he comes to you.

(2) Of course it is.

In reply to Discouraged: You are certainly a woman of character or you could not do all that you are doing so bravely. But I wish your brother and his family lived with you under the conditions which now exist you are taking a decidedly strong course, and I think you are to be irresponsible and inefficient, and at the same time sacrificing yourself. It will take a great deal of courage, but you must force him to leave even if you have to get the courts to co-operate with you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My twenty-year old son is engaged to a girl of whom I thoroughly disapprove. She is twenty-three, very pretty, an excellent dresser, but the kind who has nothing in her head except attracting men. She utterly lacks modesty and makes love with my son right before my two daughters, my husband and myself. I am sensible enough to realize that opposition will only aggravate things. Can you suggest anything for me to do?

MADAM X.

Household Hints

BREAD SUBSTITUTES.

Bread substitutes—Soak dried lima beans over night, pick over and par-boil, throw away first water. Steam till tender, season with salt and pepper. Now drop little egg dumplings in this broth on top of the beans, and cover closely. Steam fifteen minutes and serve.

Egg Dumplings.

Sift one cup of flour with the teaspoon baking powder and a quarter teaspoon of salt, and mix in one-half cup of cold water, and one whole egg, beat well and add more flour if necessary, to make a stiff drop batter. Drop with a teaspoon which has been dipped in bean broth to prevent sticking. Egg may be omitted, but a little butter in bean broth improves it.

FOR BUSY MOTHERS.

For the mothers who have little children just getting into everything, this will be a great help. Make frame about two and one-half feet wide by three feet long and slats three inches apart, set about three inches apart running up and down from platform to top rail (which may be finished along top side with a half-round strip to make it smooth for baby's hands); bore hole in each corner and put in casters. Tack light pad in bottom, put in baby's playthings with baby, and you have a nice, safe place for him or her while you are outdoors or upstairs. Also makes a nice place to

ESTHER CLEVELAND IN TENNIS GAME AT CORONADO BEACH

This new and interesting picture of Esther Cleveland, known the country over as "The White House Baby," was taken at Coronado Beach, California, the other day while she was engaged in a fast game of tennis. Miss Cleveland is the daughter of the late Grover Cleveland. Her mother was recently married to Professor Thomas Preston of Princeton, N. Y.

It has no rival. Squeeze a half lemon in a bowl of tepid water and rub the half lemon vigorously into the roots and scalp.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Magie Polishing Cloth—This is a fine, handy thing for brightening silver and does away with the muss and dust of powders. Dissolve hair cut shaved white soap into cup of hot water and when this is cold stir in three heaping tablespoons now in powdered whiting and a few drops of ammonia. Stir into a smooth jelly. Lay this jelly on clean pieces of flannel, let the cloth absorb all that is possible, and dry. A quick rub with one of these cloths will remove all tarnish.

If a garment is soiled with perspiration, wash with Indian meal and lukewarm water, instead of soap. Wall Paper Cleaner—Two cups of flour, half cup cold water, three-fourths cup salt, one tablespoon ammonia, one tablespoon coal oil. Stir all together, boil in double boiler until like a thick paste, then let it cool a little, and knead like bread dough. Put in air-tight cans, keep in cool place. This costs about five cents and is well worth trying. After cleaning windows it is very annoying to have flies dirty them immediately. To keep flies off, dampen a cloth with kerosene and rub it on glass. The disagreeable odor evaporates from the room and no flies on the windows.

Get The "Go-to-Church" Habit. Begin Tomorrow.

Tomorrow is Go-to-Church Sunday for Janesville. Hundreds of persons who are not regular attendants at church services will make a special effort to be present at morning or evening devotions or both.

It is a fact to be regretted that the term "special effort" so fully described the predicament of so many intermittent church-goers. Lackness in church attendance easily becomes a habit difficult to break and it takes some special occasion to bring to church those who are its victims.

Go-to-Church Sunday is observed in order to bring into the church fold as many as possible of this band of stragglers, who, while friends of the church, are nevertheless laggards, unwilling to enroll themselves as active workers although they may be liberal with cash donations. But when it comes to becoming a part of a Christian institution, lending a hand for work to be done, giving of time and personal service, and even doing so small a thing as attending church once every Sunday, there are too many who find it too much of a "special effort."

Go-to-Church Sunday is primarily for men, for it is men who are most delinquent in their churchly duties. Men there are who are counted among the most faithful of church workers, and then there are other men who are dragged with difficulty to church once in six months. Very often it is these men who are loudest in their criticism of the work which churches are doing, who talk about the shortcomings and narrow-mindedness of preachers, and rail at mistakes and errors which the church like any institution of this earth is liable to make. Such as these need to stop and ask themselves what have they done to make things better. If endowed with keen insight into the cause of weaknesses of church administration, organization and the like, they are the ones to suggest reforms and start the work of rejuvenation.

For those who have been neglectful of their duties toward the Christian churches, Go-to-Church Sunday offers a convenient opportunity for renewing church attendance habits of childhood, or if one has never attended church regularly it gives the same opportunity of forming the habit even though it is a little late. It gives the chance so that the start may be made quietly and without ostentation. It makes no difference what is the denominational preference, you are sure to be welcome. Go-to-Church Sunday is a Sunday of welcome, more so than usual, at every church in Janesville.

But don't stop at Go-to-Church Sunday, only. Don't make it simply another of those special Sundays of the year, like Easter or Christmas when you feel it a solemn duty to attend church service. If you do that, you have not caught the spirit of the day; you have lost the true intent which is to give people a chance to make a start in the "Go-to-Church habit." Having gone to church Sunday, keep it up, next Sunday and the one after that, and so on throughout the year. It will not take long to form the habit and then church attendance will not be a matter of "special effort." It will become a pleasure and an inspiration. Try it and see. GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY.

Glimpses of Married Life

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

What the doctor said had given Dick a jolt. Had Nell really been unhappy over the miserable gossip, he wondered? She had been so quiet he had never dreamed it was in any way a vital matter with her. As he sat by the bed and heard her moan in sleep, his conscience gave him a good lashing. To him the affair had had all the affair had had the excitement of a battle, but to poor little Nell, whose pride had been hurt, it was a matter of life and death.

Then, too, his cheap defiance of his faithful old mother's attempt to show him his error; the whole thing looked miserable when viewed in the light of suffering to Nell.

She opened her eyes and smiled up to his face, reaching out a hot little hand to his cheek.

"Is my little girl better?" he asked, dropping on his knees by the bed.

"Think so," she answered.

"Will it make you now to talk a little? I have something to say to you," he continued. "I am sorry, oh, so sorry, I did not take your advice and keep out of this babble of tongue and pen. I am afraid I have made you unhappy. I never gave the matter enough thought to realize that, which shows how utterly selfish I have been. What you said after Miss Rudolph called opened my eyes. Will you forgive me, dear?" he asked.

"What will you tell Miss Rudolph?" she asked, a little anxiously. "Do not want to be dragged into this, you know."

"That would have been easy enough at any time and is especially easy since the elopement story. I will tell her that for the sake of her good name, we must not be seen together at all; that that is the only way to quiet the chattering tongues. Dick was soothing her hot forehead with his cool hand."

"You know," said she did not care for that. "Nell reminded me of her, and she was right. I know that, but would not admit it," he replied.

Her arm stole around his neck. "I hope you know it was only for other people's opinion to stop the gossip that I cared. I never thought you cared for her, dear," she whispered. "It's time to take your medicine. Now you must go to sleep so you will get well fast. Close your eyes and will you?" The doctor said sleep was what you needed more than medicine. Have you been lying awake worrying?"

"Not many nights," she answered.

"It has been too hot to sleep," he said. "Her nerves are quieter, but the fever continues. We must break that up. Who can you get to take care of her? We might get a trained nurse from Kansas City."

"Perhaps her mother can come," suggested Dick.

So Dick sent a night letter to Mrs. Reeves, telling her of Nell's condition and asking her to come at once.

SAFFORD ARRAIGNED. Makes Tentative Plea of Not Guilty to the Charge of Perjury to New York Judge.

New York, April 10.—Frank D. Safford, who was indicted by federal grand jury for perjury alleged to have been committed as witness before United States Commissioner Houghton in the Rae Panzer mail fraud proceeding was arraigned yesterday in federal district court and entered a tentative plea of not guilty. Safford's bail was reduced from $12,000 to $10,000 but in default of surety he was demanded to the bonds. At the hearing some days ago, Safford's lawyer, Joseph W. ## Floorene—The Secret Of Home Attractiveness

There's a certain something about some homes that brings words of admiration from the lips of every visitor.

What is it? Good taste in furnishing? Undoubtedly that has much to do with it. But take from these homes their well-kept floors and woodwork, which reflect attractiveness and beauty to everything within their walls, and you will rob them of their most alluring charm.

Tasty and particular housewives discovered this secret when FLOORENE made it possible for them to beautify their floors and woodwork with but slight expense and little trouble.

Why not add this charm to YOUR home?

FLOORENE is easy to apply. It flows freely, dries quickly and costs but little.

No matter what kind of wood your floors are made of, whether hardwood or soft, FLOORENE will produce a beautiful, hard, tough surface with the lustre of polished marble. Moisture and dampness will not discolor it and heel prints will not mar white.

Dust and dirt do not collect upon a FLOORENE surface and cleaning is a question of simply wiping or mopping with clear cold water.

On woodwork too, as well as on linoleum, oil cloth, picture frames and that perfectly good-but-a-little-shabby furniture in the attic, FLOORENE will produce results you'd scarce believe are possible.

Try FLOORENE—You'll find it not only a wonderful home beautifier but a labor-saver, for FLOORENE finished floors need not be scrubbed.

ISSUE AN APPEAL FOR WELFARE WORK

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, April 10.—The National Union of Women Workers has issued an appeal for more volunteers to look after the welfare of girls in the neighborhood of soldiers' camps.

The work was started about three months ago and has met with the cordial support, both civil and military. The Union now has 1,200 volunteer patrols engaged.

Lord Kitchener recently issued a General Order informing officers that these women patrols were doing good service and should have every possible co-operation from the army of officials.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

Something like two weeks ago H. H. Tammon of Denver, Colorado, reagent to the effect that the Sells-Floto Buffalo Bill show had been refused a license to show in San Francisco at any time during the coming season.

Mr. Tammon is many times a millionaire and one of the principal owners of the Sells-Floto Buffalo Bill show, and has himself as well as his associate, W. W. Cody, Buffalo Bill, had much to do with the development of the world's fair city for the coming season, was more than Mr. Tammon could bear. He immediately announced to the Denver papers, that regardless of cost, the show would exhibit at San Francisco for five days the day and date which he had figured.

He then took a train for the west and announced when leaving Denver, that no obstacle would be too great for him to overcome for him to exhibit his show for at least five days. "For," said he, "if there is any one man in the country that thousands of people are waiting to welcome, it is Buffalo Bill, the man who had as much to do in making the development of that country possible, more than fifty years ago. For it was he that was then fighting the Indians, clearing the pathway for the early settlers, who are now the ones that were developing that new country."

H. H. Tammon has for many years been doing big things in the west, and his friends are anxiously looking forward to the outcome of the present difficulty. It is safe to say that at some time in the near future the big bill boards of San Francisco will announce the coming of the great show, if there are any two men in the country that shall receive a warm welcome at the world's fair this season, it is Buffalo Bill and H. H. Tammon. Mr. Charles Ames of Chicago, who has been prominent in circus matters for many years, has built two new machines as the "carry-alls." These are built something on the style of the "carry-alls," only that they are much larger, as their name indicates—"carry-alls."

These machines were made in Leavenworth, Kansas, by the Parker Company. Two weeks ago one was shipped to the Sells-Floto Buffalo Bill show, and another to the Yankee Robinson Shows. Each machine is loaded on three 20-foot wagons, and the three wagons are transported over the road and the car. It is said that the complete cost of the two machines and the wagons on which they are loaded, is over $20,000, and as it is not possible to run the machine, you can readily see that at a five cent fair it will have to make good money. But Charles Ames has studied it out well and his friends look forward to the venture as a big money maker the coming season.

About 65 years ago a young man by the name of Alfred Burdick was driving an overland coach from Afton to Janesville. Afton at that time was the railroad metropolis of this part of the country, for the railroad had not yet landed in Janesville. There were several coaches doing this kind of work. It was the driver's work to solicit the passengers from the train, and the first driver to crack his whip and leave Afton for Janesville, was considered the best man. But little did young Burdick think at that time that he was learning a business that would later carry him from the east into the far west. Later when the railroads pushed further west while had a tendency to put the overland drivers out of business, young Burdick commenced to look around for another job in the same line of business.

With one of the earliest circuses and menageries on the road, was the "Erie and Barnum Shows, and it was there that long team drivers were in demand. A day by the name of Bill Lewis was the boss driver, and it was to him that young Burdick appealed for work. Big Bill Lewis, a horse master, was a gruff man to approach, and when young Burdick looked him for work, Lewis immediately asked him if he could drive a long team.

"That has been my business for some time in the west," said Burdick, "where I drove overland coaches." This was the kind of a man Bill Lewis was looking for, and he immediately engaged young Burdick and it was with the "Erie and Barnum Shows" that Burdick spent nine or ten years. During this time he was also connected with the "Howe's Great London Show, and it was there that he met Madame Erell, the famous English woman who had several high class horses, which she had brought over from London, and Mr. Burdick was Madame Dockerell's private groom, for about three years.

Mr. Burdick is now living quietly in bachelor quarters at Milton, and only for an occasional visit to Milwaukee or Janesville, he can always be found in the old town where his parents stayed many years ago, and the name Burdick has been as familiar in Rock County from that time the Indians were driven out into the far west. Mr. Burdick will be 84 years old his next birthday, but carries his years lightly and can always be seen in Janesville on circuit, and he has a few days ago that he still enjoyed the circus as much as he did in his boyhood days. "And," he said, "Old Bill Lewis, the boss driver who gave me my first job in the business, died a few years ago in his ninetieth year."

But to me Mr. Burdick was a new one in the business, for he never entered my head that the oldest living showman was making his home within eight miles of Janesville, and he helped to make history in circus business nearly sixty years ago. The great Burdick and Bailey show opened in Madison Square Garden, New York City, on April 1st, and will close there on April 24th, and take a circuit from that time to the end of the season. And despite the fact that a circus of large proportion has been showing in the big hippodrome building for more than two months, only closing two days, the Burdick and Bailey show is a big business. The show comes nearer being an all American show this year than ever before, as it was impossible for many European people to leave their country. The show has many new thrills, especially in the riding acts, which are the finest that the public has ever seen.

The Ringlings open on Saturday, April 10th, at the coliseum in Chicago and close there on May 2nd, after which they go to St. Louis.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace show opened in Cincinnati on Saturday, April 24, after which they take to the one day stand. This show has been remodeled to the expense of more than $150,000 and will take the road bigger and better than ever before.

HOWE PICTURES DRAW CROWDS

Most Interesting Travel Pictures Prove Real Treat and Play to Large House.

Howe's films as shown at Myers Theatre last evening are a distinct departure from the ordinary films and as such were very much appreciated by the large audience that viewed them.

The United States Navy in 1915, showing life in Uncle Sam's great dreadnaughts from reveille to "taps" gives all sides of the complex life that exists aboard a great destroyer. In the bluejackets washing themselves and scrubbing their clothes as if this were their favorite pastime. It showed them cleaning the decks with the water running ankle deep, scrubbing boats, polishing bright work, etc. It took spectators to the ships "galley" where the cooks reign supreme. It depicted a general inspection, the big gun drills, boat drills under oars, signal drills, infantry and field artillery exercises, clearing ship for action and the manifold other duties that go to make "variety the spice of life" for man-of-war-men. In all this it convinces spectators how naval discipline and efficiency is attained and maintained, only by hard and exacting work. Besides, it showed "jack stay" racing, swimming, polo, diving, dock games, etc. Even coaching the ship is no bugbear when it comes to beating another ship's record. An unusually vivacious scene is also that showing the race-boat crew manning their twelve oared cutter for a ten mile pull through the fleet and a brush with a rival ship, also the sturdy bluejackets pulling away at 50 pound pulley weights in order to qualify for the crew.

The Philippines of today and yesterday—the past and present costumes, dances, habits, etc., of a strange people formed another noteworthy feature of last evening's program. The manifold processes and intricate operations employed in the manufacture of a National fish register at the big plant at Dayton Ohio were also shown. The cartoons or "trick" pictures which always constitute such a distinctive and amusing feature of the Howe programs were just as good as ever. The same program will be given again this evening.

Mary Pickford immortalizes 'Mistress Nell' on the screen! Mary Pickford, the highest salaried motion picture star in the world, departs from her usual style of screen interpretation in the latest production of the Famous Players Film Co., a basis of this stirring and dramatic play. Originally it was produced on Broadway and as a photoplay it has everything that made the original production successful.

Five-part film subject of "Mistress Nell," the internationally famous drama by George C. Hazelton, which is the attraction at the Apollo next Monday.

Nell Gwyn, the character portrayed by "Little Mary," is one of the greatest and sweetest of history's heroines. To her fame is added by the astonishing success of the drama of which she is the central character, and in the photoplay version of which Miss Pickford even further extends the dramatic appeal of the captivating story.

The character of Nell offers Miss Pickford many interesting opportunities to prove her wonderful versatility as a screen actress, inasmuch as the portrayal involves only the delineation of Nell, as England's favorite actress, but also that of the disguised messenger who is supposed to carry the word of King Charles.

Theatre takes particular pleasure in announcing the presentation of the first Charles E. Van Loan play to be produced by Bosworth. It is "Buckshot John," and will be shown for one day only, next Wednesday. Hobart Bosworth plays "Buckshot John," a desperado and later repentant convict, with a force and sympathy that make it a memorable figure, and who have seen him in "Western" pictures, will welcome his return to this type of play, even for one reel as in this feature film, and will remember his famous horse "Busy." Courtenay Foote was never seen to better advantage than as "The Great Gilday," and the scenes in which these two great artists play together will be long remembered. Some thrilling railroad scenes, a stern pursuit, and a sweet, wholesome love story help to make this a rare artistic and dramatic treat.

disaster to another crown. In this deception Mary Pickford supplies one of her inimitable characterizations, and her assumption of the boy's clothes, the first time in many years that she has played the part of a boy, is refreshingly novel and virile. Among the many admirable sets that comprise the production, one stands out more prominently than the others, the excellent as they all are. This is the spacious and gorgeous ballroom of the King's Palace, and the construction and general beauty of the set is worthy of complimentary notice, even though it must be remembered that the Famous Players have always maintained the highest standard of the film-producing world for their settings and mechanical adjuncts.

"MOVIES" INVASION IN NEW YORK CITY

Legitimate Drama is Being Crowded Out by Increasing Number of Movie Houses in Gotham.

(By Beau Rialto.) New York, April 10.—Despite desperate efforts of the "legit" to stem the tide of "movies," invasions of Broadway by the film shows is increasing rather than decreasing. New movie houses are now in the midst of spring openings. Gotham's "moving picture" population is also increasing. While actors and actresses complain that the movies are sending them to the soup houses and to the streets, the movie promoters insist that more work than ever is being given. The trouble to me seems that new actors and actresses are getting the jobs—while these that cannot adapt themselves to the new craze are suffering.

This week has been the launching of several new feature films and the surrender of more "legit" stars to the wiles of the movie magnates' rolls of yellow snobs. Such stars of drama as William Faversham and James K. Hackett have signed contracts to create a new bunch of matinee admirers via the screen route.

New York is one of the few places, too, where the film fans can see their favorites on the screen and then turn their heads and see them later seated at their elbow. The Vitaphone theatre, where new films are "tried on" New York audiences, is gaining popularity because so many of the film stars can be seen in the lobby or orchestra circle. This week I enjoyed a delightful new Vitaphone comedy, "Timid Mr. Toole," with Mr. and Mrs. Sidewalk in the star parts, and then found them both in adjoining seats watching how their film would "go." It went fine. Incidentally the work of John T. Kelley in the film is alone worth the price of admission.

The Friars Club is to have a new clubhouse at 106-110 West Forty-eighth street. Among subscribers are "Diamond Jim" Brady, $5,000; James K. Hackett, $5,000; Harrison Fisher, $3,000 and many at $1,000. Who said "hard times" along the Rialto?

CORRECTION IN THE APOLLO ADVERTISEMENT

Through a typographical error the prices for vaudeville at the Apollo Theatre were announced as 10c and 15c. The usual prices are in effect and the show which is presented this week is well worth more than these prices.

TOBACCO WAREHOUSES TO CLOSE WORK SOON

Federal Commission to Investigate Proposed Change in Freight Rates on Tobacco.

Tobacco warehouse operations in the city are gradually drawing to a close. At the present time a number of local dealers have finished operations within the course of a short while.

spirited revival of the buying interest has been prevalent throughout the entire 1914 crop has passed from the hands of the growers and though it is also remembered that large numbers of farmers have held out for higher prices and have worked together or separately in assorting.

The Interstate Commerce Commission sent out notices from Washington recently to the various tobacco trade organizations and others interested in the proposed freight increase on tobacco (effective March 20th) that the Commission is to the so-called official classification No. 42 has been suspended until July 15, 1915. This period of time (120 days) was provided for in an amendment to official classification.

Between now and the allotted date the commission will conduct an investigation as to the reasonableness of the proposed change, and hearings will be granted to the railroads and shippers who have protested against the change, at dates of to be fixed later.

The railroad's proposal was to charge the least tobacco and unmanufactured scrap in barrels or hogheads, less than car loads, from the fourth class, as at present, to third class, in official classification territory. This change, it was claimed, would increase the rate between New York and Chicago, on the hundred pounds, from 36.8 cents to 52.5 cents.

The many protests from all over the United States, no doubt, the determining factor in the suspension, which will now allow the tobacco industry ample time to present its grievances and submit proofs against the fairness of the proposed change.

GERMAN PEOPLE APPEAL TO SAVE ART MONUMENTS IN ALL OF WAR ZONES.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Amsterdam, April 10.—The German General Staff has issued a formal reply to numerous letters and communications expressing a desire that monuments of art and civilization in the war zones should be preserved by the German armies as far as possible.

"These appeals," says the Staff's statement, "show how deeply rooted in our people is the understanding of such culture questions. The German army is equally inspired by such sentiments, and always spares monuments when they are not either destroyed by the enemy or used in the enemy's scheme of battle."

PIERCE COUNTY FARMERS PLAN MEAT PACKING PLANT.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] River Falls, Wis., April 10.—Farmers of Pierce county and the Southern part of St. Croix county met here today to formulate plans for the establishment of a co-operative meat packing plant in this vicinity.

The farmers have already decided that such a move was advisable and selected a site and perfection of details only remains.

TWO LITTLE RUNAWAYS.

By Paul Holmes.

"Gee, but this is a good story," remarked Winsor Thorngate, as he turned a page of the "Death Dealing Dick" on the Trail of the Bandits.

"Tis? I bet it ain't as good as this one," was the reply of his friend, Harold, who had just got to where the paddle Dick was rowing with broke falls. There's an island that he'll be safe on if he can reach it, steering with his feet."

"Sny, I bet it is a peach," Winsor showed interest. "What's the name of it?"

"Death Dealing Dick's Marvelous Feat," was the instant answer.

The two boys were seated on the floor of the Thorngate attic, reading some questionable literature which had been procured from the Brown's hired man. On the floor, open lay a volume of poetry. These were for use in emergency.

There was silence for a time. Then Winsor sighed regretfully.

"Well, it's done," he said.

"Now, you like it?" inquired Harold, without glancing up from the page.

"Fine. Dick shot the rope in two. They wuz going to hang Jack with, and then the soldiers came, Gee, but I wish we could be there."

"Wouldn't it be fun, though?" echoed Harold. "Just think, we could have revolvers and lariats and high top boots and we'd ride mustangs and everything. I wonder if we couldn't."

"I don't suppose so," was the meditative reply. "But then Dick wuz only eighteen. We're ten and eight years wouldn't make much difference. Wouldn't it be fun out there, though? We'd ride into town on our cayuses and fire shots into the ground and lasso some steers and—"

"And then," broke in Harold, "we'd come back here and ride up Main street on our bronchos and we'd rope that Howard Slack, and if old Constable Dorsett tried to arrest us, we'd shoot him."

Winsor, who had been contemplating the matter, then ventured, "We'd never have to go to school out there, you know. They don't have schools out there. All we have to do is to get the horses out of the corral and go out on the prairie and hunt things."

"My, but it would be—hark!" The boy stopped suddenly. A creaking sound came from the door.

"Gee, Winsor! It's your ma!" In a moment an old trunk was opened and the magazines were thrust in. Each grasped one of the volumes from the floor. When Mrs. Thorngate entered they were seated peacefully on the trunk reading the works of Longfellow and Whittier.

"Hello, boys. Having a nice quiet time?" asked the mother. "Well, Winsor, I'm afraid I'll have to break up the reading club. I want you to take some of those cream puffs I just made down to Grandma Schmitz. I know she'll be delighted with them. And you've been such good boys this afternoon. I'll give you a dime to go to the movies with afterwards."

"All right," readily agreed Winsor. "Gee, you went down stairs, where a large bag of delicious-looking cream puffs was given them. With a parting injunction about behavior from Mrs. Thorngate they departed on their errand. As they walked down the street, Winsor opened the bag and extracted two of the largest, remarking, "There's eight and Grandma'll never know the difference."

The boys ate discussed the wild west, and slowly ambled along, finally arriving at their destination.

"You wait here, while I go in," said Winsor.

"All right," acquiesced Harold, who took a seat under a big tree. But he did not have long to wait, for Winsor soon reappeared.

"She gave me a dime," he exclaimed as soon as he was near enough.

"Huh! Is that why you wanted to go in alone? 'Fraid she'd give me a nickel and you a nickel, hey?"

"No," emphatically denied Winsor. "We're going to save it until we go west. C'mon, let's go to a show."

Thus pacified Harold withdrew his charge and the ran a race to the theatre. Of course, it was a trick of fate that a three-reel western tragedy was being featured that day. In the light, the boys read the flaring posters, "The Shadowed Ranger," and stared at a picture of a man, with gun drawn, holding a whole mob at bay.

"I'll bet it'll be swell," Winsor whispered, as he purchased two tickets. They took seats in the front row where an unobstructed view of the pictures could be obtained. Nor were they disappointed. Real after reel of bucking bronchos, lynching bees, and revolver fights flashed upon the screen. One could almost smell the powder. The end finally came in a glorious climax, where the villain, pursued by the gallant young cowboy, leaped into the ocean to avoid punishment.

Both Winsor and Harold were silent on the way back. An unspoken thought was in the mind of each. They parted, and each went home to think and dream of the same thing.

Two days later the school teacher missed the faces of Harold Brown and Winsor Thorngate when she took the roll. She thought little of it then but at that very moment some bushes beside the railroad track moved, and Winsor appeared. He wore his father's rubber boots which were much too large for him and in which he could hardly walk, and his mother's clothes-line was hung at his belt, representing a lariat. Altogether, he was a very ludicrous figure. A moment later he was joined by Harold, who was attired likewise, except that he had a cap pistol left over from the "Fourth of July."

"All ready?"

"Gee, but this is lots better than going to school. I wonder how long before we'll get out west."

"I dunno. A week, probably. Won't it be fun, though? I wonder if we'll meet Death Dealing Dick."

"I don't suppose so, but I'd like to. We'd tell him we'd read all about him and maybe he'd show us how to lasso or something. O, here comes the freight train. Can you jump it? I'm most afraid to. You get on the other side of the track, because we want to get the same car."

"Hurrah for the west!" shouted Winsor. "Sure I can jump it."

They took positions on opposite sides of the rails as the long train pulled in. It was going rather fast, but what did that matter? In a moment both boys were on the inside of an empty flat car, doing what every highly constructed boy does or seriously contemplates at least once in a lifetime, running away from home.

And yet, they were not to be severely blamed. With their reading and daily presenting such vivid pictures of an unadvised "west" what else could happen? Boys as a rule do not look far ahead. Winsor and Harold were no exceptions. Neither had thought they would be sleeping, or what they would do during the journey.

Where the "west" really was, they did not even know where the train they had climbed aboard was bound for. But not knowing, they did not worry.

The train pulled into the station for a few minutes, where it stopped and began switching. Both boys were in an agony of fright lest their car should be sidetracked and they should be discovered, but luck was with them, and at the end of a half hour the train began pulling out. As it started, Winsor incautiously raised his head to peep outside.

"Winsor Thorngate! What on earth are you doing?"

Like a flash, the person addressed threw himself to the floor of the car. The moving train gathered headway.

"Who was it?" asked Winsor in a quivering voice.

"Your pop, I guess," was the reply. "Well, anyway," said Winsor, "I guess we're safe. He couldn't catch us now if he had to." But a shadow seemed to be cast over their prospects which would not disappear.

On the whole, they rather enjoyed the ride to the next station, Belleville. It was a new and extremely interesting experience. When at last the train drew into the city and came to a stop, their project seemed successful.

But, alas for their hopes. As Winsor swung down from the car, a strange hand was laid on his shoulder.

"Hello, you little runaways. Come with me. You are under arrest."

"What!" It would be difficult to describe the tone of Winsor's voice.

"In the sheriff of this here county," announced the stranger, "and your dad phoned me up and told me to get ye as ye got off the train, and put you in jail 'til he come fur ye." But the sheriff, however stern he might be, did not have the heart to execute this cruel decree. Instead he took the badly frightened boys home with him, where they spent the rest of that day and night in solitary confinement in a bare little room. They were the picture of dejection.

The next morning Mr. Thorngate and Mr. Brown came down to take them home. It was two shame-faced little boys that got off the train at their home town and were led through the streets to separate homes, where adequate punishment was meted out.

It was in the Thorngate attic. A red-eyed Winsor opened a certain trunk and "extracted" several magazines. He held them in his hand a moment.

"Wish I'd never seen 'em. Never want to see anything like 'em again," he cried. "I wish I was a good boy and tore them out until nothing was left but shreds."

The End.

LOCAL BUILDERS IN INSURANCE COMPANY

Mutual Insurance Company Formed for Contractors at Milwaukee Yesterday.

After over three years efforts in which Janesville men engaged in the building industry were interested, there was formed the Contractor's Mutual Limited Liability Insurance company in Milwaukee, Thursday.

The fifteen men in this city are members of the state association and Emil Pauls was named as director to represent Janesville in the organization.

Under the state compensation insurance laws, the builders face heavy insurance rates to comply with the law and the mutual organization will provide for insurance that is expected to prove a benefit to those in the membership. The new organization must have 1500 "risks" before they can do underwriting work. The officers named at the Milwaukee meeting were as follows: President, Joseph J. Terrell, of Madison; Vice President, G. W. Winters, of Milwaukee; Treasurer, G. C. Chare, of Milwaukee. The directors named were,

RESTAURANT MAN OVERCOMES
DEPRESSION AND SWELLS
BUSINESS VOLUME BY PROMINENT AD-VERTISING CAM-PAIGN.

Despite insufficient Restaurant Advertising as Common but Detrimental Error.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

"If I had shared the delusion of a good many restaurant men that occasional or special holiday advertising in the newspapers was enough, I still be sitting here watching my daily receipts dwindling because of the general condition of things are spreading over the country, instead of rejoicing over their growth, each day over the last. Luckily for me, I woke up in time, and started them to work, the newspapers mean."

Arrives in Chicago With $6.00. One cold, blustery, rainy day in March, just thirty-two years ago, there arrived in Chicago a young man of twenty-five, who had come to make his fortune. His possessions consisted of as many, or as few, necessities as can be carried in a small hand bag, and an undoubted determination to make good. Financially his equipment consisted of a return ticket to Cincinnati, from whence he had come, and this he succeeded in selling for the princely sum of $6.

Born "over the Rhine" in Cincinnati, of unmistakable German antecedents, he sought out German employers, giving only second thought to the employment. For income is the prime consideration when you have six dollars between you and a muddy walk back to Cincinnati, and if you can ask for it in your mother tongue, whatever tongue that happens to be.

At least, that is how the young man reasoned, and in his case it worked out, for within two days he was working in a little German restaurant.

Save $1,000—Opens Lunch Room. When he got to be twenty-eight or so, he began to have dreams of owning his own business. But salaries were small, and it was several years' work to save a thousand dollars. But with this capital and a partner, John Kuntz opened a little German lunch room, in 1892.

For their first month in business, their total receipts were $75, bare $2.15 per day. He was his own cook, his partner the waiter, and they employed a porter. Their equipment being made up of a four-hole gas stove and a few small tables, they naturally served only sandwiches and very light lunches.

Today they seat 700 people, have 150 employees, and do a yearly business of nearly $50,000. They serve everything from crackers to venison dinners, although they still send to Cincinnati for their cottage cheese.

Says Advertising is "How."

The "how" is embodied in one sentence: "We started advertising from the start. We're still advertising, and this year will be our biggest advertising year yet."

"You see, in the restaurant business it costs about the same to feed five, for instance, as four. If you break even feeding four, you don't start making money till you're feeding five. You know pretty well each day where your profit begins, and the only way in the world to be sure of not slipping back is to keep pushing even point, and to keep pushing farther ahead of it, is to advertise."

"Another thing, a certain per cent of the people in every town are French cooking, German cooking, Italian cooking, and so forth. Establish yourself as offering the best in any of these fields, and you have a steady patronage that you can depend on. But no matter how expert your chef, or how superior your service, the only possible way to establish that fact in everybody's mind is to advertise."

Spending Less for Food This Year. "Then, this year, there came along a crucial situation for us restaurant people: war times, and a certain degree of resulting business depression. There were here to be just about as many people coming in, and still our receipts began to shrink, along about last July."

"We eventually woke up to the fact that the people were spending less for their meals. The man who had usually eaten a $2.50 dinner was probably getting along with $1.75, for instance. So it became a question of bringing in enough new people to make up the established total."

"We didn't fully realize how serious things were becoming and liable to become, till our New Year's receipts fell $400 short of the $3,700 of last year."

"Then we woke up. That is to say, we realized it was time for extra advertising. We started a campaign in the newspapers less than three months ago, advertising practically daily in prominent space."

Advertising Restores Lost Ground. "We expected results, because we've always had them. But we had hoped for things to take the jump they have taken. Even now, we've regained nearly all we lost during the six or seven months of the summer and fall. A few more weeks will see the back where we were, and at the rate we're climbing, the end of this year's contract we've made is going to see our business away out of sight of its former capacity. Results, at least, in the newspaper, the best investment we could have made in the last season, to stem the tide of the depression, and that advertising is as vital a feature of the restaurant business as well cooked food."

Restaurants Need Constant Advertising. "And please don't understand me to mean that all times and all the time when this is true. This thing of advertising only on special occasions, or at special seasons, is one of the gravest mistakes of the business. I firmly believe that the restaurant people wake up to what prominent, dignified, year round advertising will accomplish, the sooner they will be getting out of the business the best results it is capable of—and not until then."

"As an instance of only one of the things this particular campaign of mine has brought home to me: with a certain number of people who eat down town regularly or frequently, there is a drifting proposition. It is a losing proposition to let these seekers of variety lose sight of you, or continue to drift. But you need the newspapers to bring them back."

"I've proved it. For example, at least a dozen people told me this noon that the ad you saw today brought them in here, and two-thirds of them hadn't been here for weeks. These are just the ones who took the trouble to tell me. And of course that's a side issue compared to the new business it's bringing, and the pressure it's putting on the right kind of advertising assures any restaurant among the best class of diners out."

JESS WILLARD, NEW CHAMP, INSPIRES YOUTHS TO QUIT DRINK AND TOBACCO

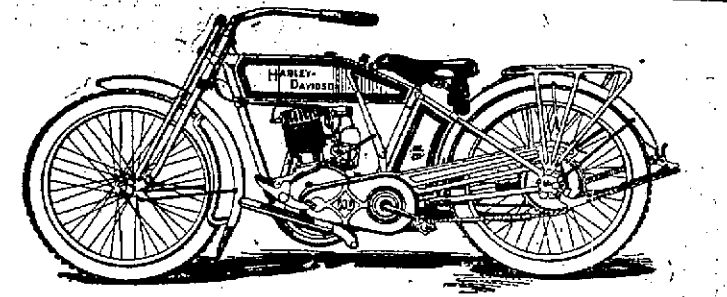

Jess Willard, whose stout punch to Johnson's jaw made him a world's hero a few days ago, has said at every opportunity that clean living and habits of temperance, more than anything else, explain his remarkable strength and stamina. And these sound moral principles have become so closely associated with Willard's name that as long as he is champ the influence will be felt. It will be especially felt among the small boys.

Young lads at impressionable ages who hope some day to be as large and healthy as Willard will be disposed to give his precepts considerable heed. If there is anyone likely to be idolized for some time to come by the young idea it is Jess Willard. He has everything that wins the adoration of the male youth. And they will be glad to do what they can to be some day like him.

Should Jess Willard assemble all the small boys of the country and read them a lecture on how to behave and be healthy and strong he could hardly impress them more than he is at present doing. Every one of them that has heard his name, which is approximately all of them, knows that chewing and smoking and drinking are poor habits to acquire if one ever hopes to be a healthy, full-grown male.

"Lay off the booze and the cigars," he is telling them, "if you want to be

Dinner Stories

Conductor Daly tells this story of a passenger on a New York trolley. An elderly lady, evidently recently imported from the conductor's own home country, one day boarded his car at Forty-fourth street. When he went to ask her for her fare she "Could I interest your husband in a new patent dog biscuit?" inquired the seedy looking wayfarer at the back door.

"I'm afraid not," said the lady of the house. "My husband is not at home, and, besides, we don't keep a dog."

"That's what I wanted to know!" exclaimed the tramp, pushing his way into the kitchen. "Now fix me up a good square meal, and be quick about it."

"In what way?" asked the teacher of the class in civics, "is the American method of choosing public servants superior to that in use elsewhere?"

"We get election day off," replied the brightest boy in the class.

PROLOGUE.

Here is a realistic description of American life, which teaches the lesson that the right will always prevail when people's consciences are aroused.

In a middle west city a young Englishman, lately arrived from his native land, joins in the movement to stamp out corruption and immorality. He becomes interested in a girl whose father is the brains of a dishonest political combination, and naturally some very interesting complications develop.

A visit by Billy Sunday, the noted evangelist, to the city causes a great sensation, and the story of what he accomplishes is typical of his operations elsewhere.

This is a story that will increase civic pride and civic decency and will thrill every reader. It literally throbs with action, and the characters are depicted with the accuracy of a painter's brush.

Another notable feature of the story is that it attacks hypocrisy in most effective fashion and shows that truth and sincerity are winning factors for the man who strives for a successful career.

CHAPTER I.

The Immigrant.

THE liner Neptune raised its anchor slowly in Queenstown harbor. She had sailed from Liverpool, but called at the Irish harbor for the European passengers who preferred to embark at that point as well as the travelers from Ireland. The liner steamed majestically out to sea, its four funnels pouring out clouds of smoke.

"I am glad to see so many immigrants from northern Europe on board this ship. They are Europe's life blood, and we are draining the old world dry." Two young men were standing on the upper deck on their first day out from Queenstown. They were gazing down on the crowded steerage as one of them expressed himself in those words. The speaker was evidently a young American returning from a European trip. His companion was a fellow voyager in the first cabin, who had stopped for a moment at his side as he paced the deck of the vessel.

"I am an immigrant myself, sir," was the quiet response. "I was just thinking now of what may possibly await all of us immigrants on the shores of your land of promise."

The American turned to face the stranger, whom he had addressed freely in the belief that he was a companion American. It was a most promising young manhood that met the gaze of Albert Townley, which was the American's name. A little taller than the medium height, square shouldered, clear eyed, with a thoughtful brow and a firm mouth, this young traveler had an air of authority and mystery which Albert Townley's quick eye at once recognized.

"I can tell you what awaits you in America, sir," he said, after a brief pause. "You will find life there and all that life means."

"What does life mean in your country?" inquired the immigrant.

"Life with us, sir," answered the American, "means action, energy, struggle and victory."

"Does it never mean defeat?" asked the other thoughtfully, speaking with a note of pathos in his voice.

The enthusiastic son of the new world answered quickly and emphatically. "Never. Defeat is death, not life, with us."

"It is life I want," responded the other, gazing out over the sea.

Just as the immigrant said this a fierce yell arose from the steerage deck below, and Albert Townley exclaimed, "There's something going on down there. Let us go down."

Hurrying to a stairway which led to the steerage quarters, the two cabin passengers descended and found the steerage deck a scene of strife and confusion. A number of Irish immigrants had seized and were holding against the vigorous attacks of a crowd of Germans a desirable part of the steerage deck. Greatly outnumbered, the Irishmen were struggling like demons and yelling like Mohawk Indians, while their opponents were doggedly seeking to gain the coveted position, for, as one of the bystanders explained to Townley, the Germans had been first in possession, but the Irish, anxious for a little excitement, had suddenly charged them with a rush. Before the astonished Teutons knew exactly what was happening they had been driven off by the furious Irish like chaff before the wind, but they soon rallied their forces and returned to the attack. The contest was a good natured melee at first, both sides laughing hilariously, but as it continued Townley and his companion could see that the combatants were getting more earnest and the persistent Germans were determined to win back their place of vantage and they were pressing hard the little company of Irish's men.

Just then an officer of the ship, attracted by the noise, appeared on the deck. Rushing into the midst of the struggling mass of humanity, he began to deal blows right and left, shouting at the top of his voice.

"Stop it, you dogs; stop it, stop it!" "Take that, ye impudent spalpeen! I'm no dog," said an athletic young Irishman as he dealt the ship's officer a stunning blow on the ear, which sent him staggering to the rail of the liner.

Furiouly enraged by the blow, the officer shouted to three sailors who were standing nearby holding a hose. "Turn the water on them." The sailors with evident glee turned the big nozzle of the deck hose on the crowd and began drenching them with salt water.

The unfortunate combatants, who up to this time had been acting in a spirit of hilarity, were taken aback by this unexpected assault of brine.

"Shut it off, shut it off," they cried in chorus. "It's all in fun."

But the sailors, urged on by the irate officer, continued to soak the drenched men and even sent the water pouring over the women and children on the outskirts.

"What a shame to wet the poor devils like that!" said Townley indignantly. The words awoke his companion to instant action. With one bound the first cabin immigrant was beside the sailors and before they could guess his purpose he had snatched the hose from their hands and turned it full on their own faces, sending the three sailors sprawling to the deck. Then, throwing the spouting hose over the deck rail, where it splashed harmlessly into the ocean, he rejoined Townley. In an instant two or three Irishmen rushed forward and gashed the hose with their pocket knives, rendering it useless. The discomfited sailors struggled to their feet and turned off the water.

"Who are you, sir? What do you mean?" roared the officer, advancing toward the cabin immigrant.

"Not yet, James. I have still more to say to you—more to confess. Here! Take this package of letters. Read them as you sit beside his bed—not his deathbed, for I shall restore him to health, never fear. If he were to die, I should curse myself to the end of time, for I and I alone would have been the cause. Here are her letters—and the one Feverell wrote to her. This is her deathbed letter to you. And this is a letter to her son and yours! You may some day read it to him. And here—this is a document requiring me to share my fortune with her son. It is a pledge that I took before my father died a few years ago. If the boy ever appeared, he was to have his mother's share of the estate—and it is not an inconsiderable amount, James. He is independent of you. He need ask nothing of you. I was taking him home to his own."

She shrank slightly as he stood over her. There was more of wonder and pity in his face than condemnation. She looked for the anger she had expected to arouse in him, and was dumfounded to see that it was not revealed in his steady, appraising eyes.

"Your plan deserved a better fate than this, Therese. It was prodigious! I—I can almost pity you."

"Have—have you no pain—no regret—no grief?" she cried weakly.

"Yes," he said, controlling himself with difficulty. "Yes, I know all these and more." He picked up the package of letters and glanced at the subscription on the outer envelope. Suddenly he raised them to his lips and, with his eyes closed, kissed the words that were written there. Her head drooped, and a sob came into her throat. She did not look up until he began speaking to her again, quietly, even patiently. "But why should you, even in your longing for revenge—why should you have planned to humiliate and degrade him even more than I could have done? Was it just to your sister's son that you should blight his life, that you should turn him into a skulking, sneaking betrayer? What would you have gained in the end? His loathing, his scorn—my God, Therese, did you not think of all this?"

"I have told you that I thought of everything. I was mistaken. I did not stop to think that I would be taking him away from happiness in the shape of love that he might bear for someone else. I did not know that there was a Lydia Desmond. When I came to know, my heart softened and my purpose lost most of its force. He would have been safe with me, but would he have been happy? I could not give him the kind of love that Lydia promised. I could only be his mother's sister to him. He was not in love with me. He has always loved Lydia. I fascinated him—just as I fascinated you. He would not have gone away with me, even after you had told him that he was not your son. He would not do that to you. James, in spite of the blow you struck him. He was loyal to Lydia and to himself."

"And what did he think of you?" demanded Brood scornfully.

"If you had not come upon us here, he would have known me for who I am and he would have forgiven me. I had asked him to go away with me. He refused. Then I was about to tell him the whole story of my life, of his life and of yours. Do you think he would have refused forgiveness to me? No! He would have understood."

"But up to that hour he thought of you as a—what shall I say?"

"A bad woman? Perhaps. I did not care. It was part of the price I was to pay in advance. I would have told him everything as soon as the ship on which we sailed was outside the harbor yonder. That was my intention, and I know you believe me when I say that—there was nothing more in my mind. Time would have straightened everything out for him. He could have had his Lydia, even though he went away with me. Once away from here, do you think that he would ever return? No! Even though he knew you to be his father, he would not forget that he has never been your son. You have hurt him since he was a babe. Would he forget? Would he forgive? No! When you came into this room and found us, I was about to go down on my knees to him to thank him for saving me from my own designs. I realized then, as I had come to suspect in the past few months, that I had not counted on my own conscience. James, I—I would not have carried out my plan. I had faltered and my cause was lost. What have I accomplished? Am I able to gloat over you? What have I wrought, after all? I weakened under the love she bore for you, permitted it to creep in and fill my heart. Do you understand? I do not hate you

"Not yet, James. I have still more to say to you—more to confess. Here! Take this package of letters. Read them as you sit beside his bed—not his deathbed, for I shall restore him to health, never fear. If he were to die, I should curse myself to the end of time, for I and I alone would have been the cause. Here are her letters—and the one Feverell wrote to her. This is her deathbed letter to you. And this is a letter to her son and yours! You may some day read it to him. And here—this is a document requiring me to share my fortune with her son. It is a pledge that I took before my father died a few years ago. If the boy ever appeared, he was to have his mother's share of the estate—and it is not an inconsiderable amount, James. He is independent of you. He need ask nothing of you. I was taking him home to his own."

She shrank slightly as he stood over her. There was more of wonder and pity in his face than condemnation. She looked for the anger she had expected to arouse in him, and was dumfounded to see that it was not revealed in his steady, appraising eyes.

"Your plan deserved a better fate than this, Therese. It was prodigious! I—I can almost pity you."

"Have—have you no pain—no regret—no grief?" she cried weakly.

"Yes," he said, controlling himself with difficulty. "Yes, I know all these and more." He picked up the package of letters and glanced at the subscription on the outer envelope. Suddenly he raised them to his lips and, with his eyes closed, kissed the words that were written there. Her head drooped, and a sob came into her throat. She did not look up until he began speaking to her again, quietly, even patiently. "But why should you, even in your longing for revenge—why should you have planned to humiliate and degrade him even more than I could have done? Was it just to your sister's son that you should blight his life, that you should turn him into a skulking, sneaking betrayer? What would you have gained in the end? His loathing, his scorn—my God, Therese, did you not think of all this?"

"I have told you that I thought of everything. I was mistaken. I did not stop to think that I would be taking him away from happiness in the shape of love that he might bear for someone else. I did not know that there was a Lydia Desmond. When I came to know, my heart softened and my purpose lost most of its force. He would have been safe with me, but would he have been happy? I could not give him the kind of love that Lydia promised. I could only be his mother's sister to him. He was not in love with me. He has always loved Lydia. I fascinated him—just as I fascinated you. He would not have gone away with me, even after you had told him that he was not your son. He would not do that to you. James, in spite of the blow you struck him. He was loyal to Lydia and to himself."

"And what did he think of you?" demanded Brood scornfully.

"If you had not come upon us here, he would have known me for who I am and he would have forgiven me. I had asked him to go away with me. He refused. Then I was about to tell him the whole story of my life, of his life and of yours. Do you think he would have refused forgiveness to me? No! He would have understood."

"But up to that hour he thought of you as a—what shall I say?"

"A bad woman? Perhaps. I did not care. It was part of the price I was to pay in advance. I would have told him everything as soon as the ship on which we sailed was outside the harbor yonder. That was my intention, and I know you believe me when I say that—there was nothing more in my mind. Time would have straightened everything out for him. He could have had his Lydia, even though he went away with me. Once away from here, do you think that he would ever return? No! Even though he knew you to be his father, he would not forget that he has never been your son. You have hurt him since he was a babe. Would he forget? Would he forgive? No! ## STATE NORMALS BALK INVESTIGATION WORK

EDIT PRELIMINARY STATEMENT OF SURVEY ELIMINATING OBJECTIONABLE CRITICISMS.

REPORT NEVER FILED

Then Regents Give Investigator a $400 a Month Job and Grant Him a Leave of Absence to Finish Work.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., April 10.—That after $5,166.24 in salary and $381.55 in expenses had been paid for a survey of the state normal schools, the normal school state board of regents, the investigator at a salary of $400 a month and that the survey report has never been filed, was one of the most sensational disclosures in the inquiry of the state joint legislative investigating committee.

That this was done was the sworn testimony of A. N. Farmer, who made the survey, as well as of other persons connected with the state normal schools. That this testimony was taken was disclosed in the legislative committee debate over the charge that the normal school lobby is persistently active. The charge was made in that the committee hearing a new job for Mr. Farmer, and that by so doing they were able to secure this report, which sharply criticized the present conduct of the schools and their financial extravagance, and cut out of it the criticisms he had prepared to make.

Normals Edit Report.
In his testimony Mr. Farmer admitted allowing the normal school presidents to edit his report, which he says he still plans to complete so that the state can be charged for the job.

Here are some of the things admitted by Mr. Farmer and others in this investigation.

That after a year of work on this survey he made up copies of his criticisms, sent them to the normal presidents, and then called a conference of Presidents Pearce of Milwaukee and Keith of the Oshkosh Normal. This conference followed a conference in June last, with President Kronsberg of the normal school regents, at which there was a discussion of his permanent employment by the board. He, however, continued at work on his survey, and in September the board of regents arranged with him to occupy a new position, supervisor of efficiency of practice and teaching at a salary of $400 a month for ten months of the year.

That following this September decision, he had a conference in November last with the normal presidents, when the survey preliminary report was submitted to them for their suggestions.

Gets Double Pay.
That he has not as yet completed the report, but that he has been given leave of absence, and still drawing his salary as supervisor of efficiency, to complete the survey for which separate payment is made by the state. That extensive changes were made in this report by the various normal school authorities who were consulted.

The administration committeemen who made these discoveries, now charge that the new job was established to put the clamp of silence upon the investigator after his investigations conferred with those in which he was to frame his report.

The committee, however, has secured the original unedited report, which will be used in future hearings to stop normal school activities.

GIRL WHO SUES BROKER FOR $50,000 SAYS OTHER JILTED MAIDENS WILL AID HER

Miss Rose Holland and Butler Storke.

In her $50,000 suit for breach of promise against Butler B. Storke, "boy wizard" of La Salle street, Chicago, a couple of years back, Miss Rose Holland, pretty telephone girl, says she will have the assistance of some of the other young women of her acquaintance. Miss Holland gives a vivid account of her "unmarried honeymoon" with Storke in a diary made public at the time the suit was filed.

For the legislature.
Mr. Farmer testified that without any previous experience in this work, he came from St. Cloud, Minn., to Wisconsin to work as a representative of the New York Bureau of Municipal Research.

Opposed New Schools.
A most important part of the sworn testimony which has just been made public is that until his employment by the regents, Mr. Farmer was not in favor of the establishment of two new normal schools in the northeastern portion of the state, which were much desired by the normal regents. His recommendation, according to those who have seen the report as it is edited since his acceptance of his new position, does not contain his criticism of the establishment of new normal schools. The normal regents propose to spend big sums as an initial investment in each of these schools.

Mr. Farmer says he was released by the regents under leave of absence, his salary to continue, on Dec. 20 to finish the survey, but it has not yet been completed. The survey advance report was completed in June last and then the series of conferences began with the normal officials which resulted in the establishment of a new job for Mr. Farmer to fill.

BELGIANS USE MANY AMERICAN CARS IN NORTHERN FIGHTING

Small Existing Army Buys Automobiles in Large Lots—A Trip Described.

In the official news from Europe little mention is made of the small remnant of the Belgian army which fought so gallantly in the early stages of the war. But a letter just received by an American car company, from the chief mechanic in charge of the big squad of 300 cars purchased by Belgium in one lot shortly after the outbreak of hostilities, proves that the small army is still a factor in the northern fighting.

An interesting description is given of one many trips from Calais to the fighting front, the cars are called upon to make. The letter gives an inkling of the terrific conditions under which the automobiles are forced to work continuously.

"I was ordered to drive the director of the cannon factory and an officer from Calais to the front," runs the letter. "In addition to the passengers, the car, which has a transport body like that of other machines in use here, was loaded with artillery parts, repairing guns together with a quantity of petrol and oil necessary to last us the entire drive. The weather was cold and foggy with a strong wind blowing off the sea."

Before leaving Calais we were stopped by the first of the many sentries encountered everywhere. They sprung up suddenly, apparently out of the ground like jacks in the box. We were stopped three times before arriving at Dunkirk and each time we were forced to show our papers and pass them. Every precaution is taken against spies, but they manage to get within the lines in spite of the risks they run.

In the towns we were only allowed to maintain a speed little faster than a walk, but in the open road there is no limit. The car often reached a speed of fifty miles an hour with its full load.

After leaving Dunkirk the hard driving started. Upon leaving the town we turned sharp to the right and followed the canal for a long distance. We passed a number of cars smashed and deserted at the roadside. We saw another car upside down in the canal. It had evidently been deliberately driven into the canal to prevent capture at some time.

When we left the canal banks the roads became exceedingly rough and were fearfully cut up by the passing of heavy transports, the troops and artillery. While rounding a turn at fair speed I had to jam on the brakes to keep from running into some nasty looking barb wire entanglements which stretched across the road about two feet high. Upon alighting I found that there was just enough room left for our car to crawl through diagonally across the road.

We had just gotten up speed again when we were forced to stop and squeeze past some earthworks built on either side of the road, allowing just room enough to get the car through with a great deal of manipulation and close work. Immediately after that we encountered a series of entrenchments dug almost clear across the road. A fall into these big ditches would probably put the car out of commission and seriously injure the passengers.

Sleet and snow, which came at this point, would have made driving very difficult and dangerous, had it not been for the windshield on the car. When we arrived at Houthain, once a prosperous Belgian city, we found it occupied entirely by the military, practically all of the inhabitants having left. The streets were alive with soldiers, horses and guns, going to and from the fighting front, or changing positions. In the distance we could hear the continuous booming of the Belgian 180 millimeter guns. In the city we lunched on sandwiches and lumps of chocolate and were on our way again in less than a quarter of an hour.

The only road from here to the front was of the roughest sort, hurriedly constructed for army use. In some instances the ruts were fully a foot deep. Our car sped over fields, bumped over railroad crossings, foundered in mud up to the axles, and I drove half the time with the front wheels caught in the great ruts made by the heavy guns.

We finally reached our destination, where noise of the guns was deafening. This, with the crack of the mitrailleuse, the shrieking of shells and the continuous galloping of batteries, made bedlam of what used to be a peaceable farming country. I unloaded the car as soon as soon as possible and started the return journey in the dark. And driving at night in Belgium is far different from the night driving you know. Your work requires full speed and yet you are allowed only half of your lights and even they must be dimmed.

If you could but know the rough treatment the automobiles have been having over here, you would realize more than ever their ability to stand far more than any of the strains of ordinary usage. It is regular practice here to drive in a manner which would not be countenanced in the United States. We get to our destination as quickly as possible, with the car disabled we leave it and take another. We have neither the time nor facilities for making repairs.

The fact that I have driven the same car under these extreme conditions since its arrival in Belgium last September, seems to me the best possible evidence of its wonderful stamina.

COLORADO LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS AT MIDNIGHT; LAWMAKERS ARE HAPPY.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Denver, Colo., April 10.—The Colorado legislature will adjourn at midnight tonight. When this date was decided on by joint resolution, one Denver afternoon paper cartooned the public dancing for joy and shouting: "Three Rousing Cheers." All this was under the heading, "Oh Glory, Legislature and April 10 and Let Us All Arise and Rejoice." Another afternoon paper's head was: "Cheer, Brother, Cheer!" The cause of this hilarity was the legislature's alleged "do-nothing" record. Up to the eleventh hour of the session it had passed only one important bill, the measure carrying out the people's referendum that Colorado shall be saloonless after January 1, 1916.

GATHER TO OBSERVE PEACE ANNIVERSARY

GRAND ARMY VETERANS OF CITY
HAVE EXERCISES ON ANNI-VERSARY OF LEE'S
SURRENDER.

BUELL GIVES ADDRESS

City School Superintendent Reviews
Immense Results of War of the Rebellion.

John B. Smith of Avalon, a member of W. H. Sargent Post No. 20, G. A. R., who was through S. C. Burnham he has arranged to leave the sum of one hundred dollars to Sargent Post at this date. The sum of this amount will draw five percent interest from Mr. Smith while he lives. The interest for the first year was given to the Post last evening at the exercises by Mr. Burnham, who received the amount yesterday afternoon from the Avalon man. Mr. Smith's only condition is that he be buried with military honors.

Members of W. H. Sargent Post No. 20, G. A. R., last evening, at East Side I. O. O. F. hall, observed with fitting ceremonies the fifth anniversary of the surrender to the Army of the Potomac at Appomattox court house, Virginia, April 9, 1865. Members of the Women's Relief Corps were also on hand and as much color to the occasion as the patriotic numbers of the program.

Commander L. M. Nelson presided. The gathering opened with every one joining in singing "The Red, White and Blue." The veterans planned this celebration as a roll call and had made urgent requests on every member of the post to be present. It was a noble. Quite a number answered to their names as Adjutant Viney called the roll, but it was but a corporal's guard in comparison to the numbers that formerly were members. Cautious and letters of regret, some of the latter interesting descriptions of the part of the Union they were visiting. They were received from A. F. Hall in Florida; Samuel H. Stone in Ohio; Charles W. Stark at Tiffin; W. J. McNayre at Phoenix, Ariz.; B. F. Bucklin whose presence was made impossible by illness and from J. A. Klipp, who is at the Wisconsin Veterans' home at Waupaca.

C. S. Burnham was the first speaker of the evening. Mr. Burnham briefly reviewed the struggle between the north and south in the war of secession and reiterated the thought that either was a worthy foe; equal in courage, strength and intelligence. "Following the bloody struggle," he said, "the south, termed by the speaker as a prodigal son, was received back generously and fully respected. Now, he said, this family of states stands up as one of the greatest in the world. The bond of union will always remain, for the territory is just big enough for one nation—not two. Then again, our country today is locked up to a and expected as one of the greatest nations of the world."

Miss Lillian Dudley rendered "Last Night Was the End of the World," in a delightful manner and responded to the encore with "Tipperary." Miss Ariel Sartell played the solo accompaniment on the piano.

H. C. Buell, superintendent of the city school system, gave the principal address of the evening. Mr. Buell is no stranger to the veterans, having appeared before them on numerous occasions. He spoke four years ago at the time he first met the veterans at the beginning of the war and stated last evening he was pleased to speak at the anniversary of the close.

Mr. Buell's address was a tribute of American gratification to the soldiers. Briefly he enumerated the stupendous results of the strife, and of the part the men played, although at the time now factoring the future, figuring on the stupendous changes the war of the rebellion was to make.

Prof. Buell believed that the crisis of the trouble was reached when the confederate flag was first hoisted on which the flag of the Union was flying. He briefly reviewed the war, mentioning Gettysburg and Vicksburg as the greatest of the battles fought, and Gettysburg being one of the greatest struggles in the history of civilization.

"The results of the war are stupendous," he said, "and there is a wealth of character to be found in these now historic documents which passed between Gen. Grant and Gen. Lee. There was no element of weakness in the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomattox. Neither was there weakness in the latter's victory. Speaking of the economic results of the war, Prof. Buell said that they are never to be measured. All honor is due to the men of war who appeared out their gold at this time that the cause of the Union might prosper. Honor too, to the millions who withdrew from the arts of production to hurl themselves into the art of destruction.

"It is hard to estimate the problems that confronted the north and south at the time of readjustment, when the war was closed and people were beginning to think of the ways and manner of bringing about economic conditions in a peaceful way. In the south in particular, conditions were trying. Here the entire labor system had to be made over. Heretofore used to free labor, the slave, the south for a long while was engaged in adjusting itself to the new mode.

"Many things came up to whip into action that the name of honor was bound to exist at that time. I remember the Tilden-Hayes presidential incident. You do, too, but like this many more of our other little troubles were amably settled.

"It is hard too, to estimate the results of the soldier in politics. Five presidents have sat at the White House because of the military records. After the war the politicians had to cater to the soldier vote. In congress the soldier predominated. Governors, legislatures, state and national judges were all soldiers for a long period following the strife. Incidentally this condition brought out many good phases of American politics and American politics have shown material improvements since the close of the civil war.

"The influence on the intellectual life of the nation was also stupendous. Our rapid strides in literary progress are unsurpassed. We have become the greatest reading nation of the world and our books, magazines and newspapers are easily considered the best of the age. Gradually the Union has become one of the most literate and one of the least illiterate nations of the world. No, the results can never be measured.

Mrs. Howard Sallor entertained with two excellent declamations. Her first number was a patriotic selection "The Colonel's Crater" and her second, an encore response, "Society Joins a Lodge." Both were well rendered and delightfully received, especially the latter, which kept the old soldiers and their wives in continuous upheavals of laughter and mirth.

J. P. Carle perhaps gave the most stirring address of the evening. It was short and to the point, but created in the hearts of everyone present that tingling feeling of patriotism that thrills us as only a true American can be thrilled. Mr. Carle told of the day, fifty years ago, when the breathless messenger astride a foaming horse, burst into their camp and shouted, Lee has surrendered to General Grant. He told of the consternation and the cheers that broke forth with the receipt of the news.

"The war was over we knew," Mr. Carle said. "To points to the east, and the west and to the point, but south in the same manner was heard, 'Lee has surrendered.' So did the entire country receive this news. With shouts of gladness they knew that the four years had closed. And north every mother's heart was glad and they thanked the good God for the end. And you, too, my comrades, must thank God that he spared you to live to see the day when the progress of that Union for which you were ready to offer your lives back in '61-'65."

Orders which passed between General Lee and Grant and Secretary of War Stanton were read by Mrs. Lester. Following the close of the program the assembly adjourned to the dining room where the Relief Corps had prepared an excellent supper.

Should Get Busy at Once and "Swat the Fly."

Children of the First and Third wards had better get a busy at once if they propose to be in the running in the fly contest of the Junior Civic league. The weekly count at the public library this morning showed that destroyers of the obnoxious pests in the above mentioned wards were conspicuous because of their absence.

Today, three from the First ward, two from the Fourth and one child from the Fifth had their captured and dead flies counted. Edna Greger, 611 Locust street, went to the head house list with 1,300; Ferris Hitchcock, 12 Milton avenue, 500, and Albert Sager, 512 South High street, Hubert Hilton, 908 Prairie avenue, Miss Sade Colp, 315 North Bluff street and Clifford Wandell, 615 Linn street, 100 flies each, 2,200 in all.

At the Apollo Theatre this morning Prof. J. L. Gillen of the University of Wisconsin gave an interesting lecture to a large gathering of children, and parents on the fly. Prof. Gillen illustrated his talk with stereoscopic slides and showed the many deleterious effects which flies are permitted to multiply without some means taken to exterminate them. Manager Zanias donated the use of the theatre to the Junior Civic league for the lecture.

Evansville News

Evansville, April 10.—The following extracts were taken from a New York paper of murder and robbery March 21, 1915: "The hamlet of West Shelby was the scene of a double murder some time during Sunday night, but the crime was not discovered until early Monday. Charles Phelps, a well known and wealthy farmer and his housekeeper, Miss Margaret Wolcott, were shot and killed and the house ransacked by the person or persons who committed the crime. "That robbery was the motive that prompted the crime is generally conceded. "Mr. Phelps was shot three times. One bullet struck him in his side going through his heart and penetrating his lungs, another lodged in his arm and a third struck his head going through the skull and lodging in his brain. "Phelps was a bachelor and a life-long resident of Shelby and a thoroughly upright and honest man and held in respect by all knowing him." "Mr. Phelps was a cousin of Mrs. C. C. Howard, Mrs. Frank Chase, Charles and Hyatt Weaver and Mrs. L. Van

STORE BULLETIN AND NEWS

Published in the interest of the Public at Large and All Who Are Interested in Our New Store.

Written at The Store.

The Golden Eagle, April 10th, 1915.

One Price Policy

Appeals to Women

Numerous Commendations

Prove Our Course

Correct One.

We have been commended on every side for our decisive stand on the matter of the one-price policy. Patrons by the score have told us that it is the proper course to pursue—that they feel safer when buying a garment here—that they know they are getting their full money's worth and are not paying for their garment what was cut off the price of someone else's garment. Of course, we have lost some business, because of our determination not to cut the price on any garment, but we believe that in a short time everyone will learn that it is to their profit to buy at a one-price store where they may have the fullest confidence in the garments they buy and the price they pay—where they know they are being asked an honest price and are not being held up in the first place.

Unusual Display of Corsets, Gloves, Hosiery, Neck- wear.

In Golden Eagle Suits you may select from many smart styles—not from a few only. The Golden Eagle line of suits and coats is in close touch with style developments in the East—always new styles and not many of each style. Among them are reproductions of many fascinating imported model suits. Not only are the styles new but the values are most unusual. Hand tailored—ing, materials of a high standard, lining the best and styles becoming to every figure.

We certainly made a hit with the special line of Spring Suits and Coats, bought for spot cash earlier this week in New York by our Mr. Bridges. The prices, $18.75 for the Silk Suits and $9.85 for the Coats prove irresistible and business was rushing all day. It is our idea to continue to bring out the new things first and to give Golden Eagle patrons the benefits of our buying facilities at all times.

There are a hundred and one little things in this immense new stock that are seldom mentioned in our advertisements. If there should be some item that you want but don't see, just ask us and we'll see that you're promptly supplied. We want to render the utmost in commercial service.

ENTERPRISING JEWELER CUTS PRICES ON WATCHES TO MEET CATALOG HOUSES

O. H. Olson Announces a Sale That Should Be the Means of Confining the Buying of Watches To Janesville. Gives Reasons For Doing So and His Methods.

There is one store in Janesville that is determined that Janesville money shall be spent in Janesville. That store and that merchant is O. H. Olson, the jeweler at 128 Corn Exchange.

"The only way to keep Janesville money in Janesville, says Mr. Olson, 'is to sell at prices that will not cause people to send their money out of town.'

"Take watches for instance, I know that a lot of watches are bought in Chicago from the catalogue houses. There is no reason for this except that people here imagine they can buy cheaper from the catalogue houses.

"Hereafter they will not be able to. I am going to meet any catalogue price that was ever quoted and I challenge any mail house or any other store to meet my prices day in and day out.

"Watches are watches and there can not be two grades for a Hamilton 21 jewel movement is just like every other Hamilton 21 jewel movement as to quality. Therefore everyone knows what he is buying.

"How can I do it. There is no black art used or needed. It is very simple. As everyone knows I am out of the high rent district. I have a small store. My cost of doing business is very low and so I don't have to add a large percentage in order to get a reasonable net profit.

"I buy for cash and buy what and where I please because of it. You would be surprised at the discounts that are given in the jewelry business when a store pays cash and has a reputation of paying cash. I have not been carrying accounts on my books for years either. That adds a lot to the cost of doing business.

"Take into consideration all these things and there is no question of how it can be done.

"I am not doing this to hurt stores in this city but to keep Janesville money in Janesville and I think I am deserving of the business. I am right here to take care of the watch too, which ought to be worth something."

Years of Experience.

There is no need of an introduction of O. H. Olson to the people of Janesville. His business dealing with his patrons in the past have always been of the highest order. No one has ever said that he did not treat them right.

An offer such as he is making in tonight's paper then has greater value attached to it because of this.

Before coming to Janesville Mr. Olson was employed in the shops and store of the largest manufacturing and retail jeweler of Chicago. He is a workman that knows his trade from one end to the other. He is particularly experienced in watch work and has done a great deal of watch repairing in this city.

For many years he was associated with the firm of Olin and Olson leaving there last year to open his present store with G. L. Bogardus. A few months later Mr. Olson purchased Mr. Bogardus' interest and has since accumulated a very enviable patronage.

He is an expert judge of diamonds and jewelry and his patrons have learned to trust to his judgment knowing that their interests will be protected. Such a reputation is worth much to both dealer and customer.

Going After M. O. Houses.

Mr. Olson in his interview above explains that he is determined that Mail Order houses shall not get any more of his business if he can help it. People do not stop to figure that they are not really saving money by buying out of town. Mr. Olson further says:

"There is one way, and one way only, to beat the mail order game, viz.: to meet mail order prices, then talk it, advertise it, and go after it the same as you would any other competition. If a merchant cannot buy low enough to do this, then he must devise better buying methods that will enable him to meet mail order prices. But I can buy low for the reasons given above and I feel sure the public will realize what I am saving them.

"I have many advantages in the fight the principal one being an expense to do business of about one-half that of city or mail order stores.

"I am quoting some very low prices on watches in tonight's paper and I anticipate an enormous business to-night and next week."
